2 Masked Bandits Abducted Woman

Bloodstained Pillow Slip and Burned Clothing Found Nearby.

By the Associated Press.

Yuba City, Calif., Sept. 2.—A wealthy rancher's report that his wife had been kidnaped and held for $15,000 ransom started an intensive manhunt in California's "Peach Bowl" today.

Armed orchardists, national guardsmen and United States Department of Justice agents, under N. J. Peiper, head of the San Francisco division, joined in the search a few hours after W. R. Meeks, the rancher, notified Sheriff A. W. Kimerer that Mrs. Meeks, 55, had been bound and carried off by two men who invaded their home just before midnight.

Bloodstained Cloth Found.

[Fragments of burned clothing and a blood-stained pillow slip found by a national guardsman along a road near the Meeks ranch tonight increased fears that Mrs. Meeks had been killed, the United Press said. There was nothing to indicate immediately that the articles belonged to Mrs. Meeks, Capt. E. M. Kelly, of the guard, said.—Editor's note.]

Meeks told officers the raiders apparently entered the house while he and his wife were at the front door saying good-night to departing guests.

The rancher reported the two men, one of them showing a pistol, first ransacked the house and collected $8 or $7 in cash before mentioning kidnaping. He said the invaders then bound Mrs. Meeks and himself.

Ready to Sell Ranch.

"Unless you pay $15,000 by midnight Saturday you'll never see your wife again," Meeks quoted the men as saying.

Meeks professed inability to raise $15,000 but said he would sell his orchard if necessary in his attempt to meet the reported demands.

He said they broke into his garage, took his automobile and drove away with Mrs. Meeks.

"We'll contact you in a couple of days for that $15,000," the rancher quoted them as saying as they carried Mrs. Meeks to the car.

Talked of Chair.

Meeks said he worked himself free of his bonds and telephoned the sheriff. He was unable to give a good description of the men but said they appeared to be about 24 years old, 5 feet 9 or 10 inches in height, were roughly dressed, wore handkerchiefs over the lower part of their faces, spoke with "an Oklahoma accent" and talked about "the electric chair."

Officers thought they might have come from the Midwest "dust bowl."

Four hours after the kidnaping, the automobile containing Mrs. Meeks' purse and glasses was found abandoned in Marysville, 12 miles north of the Meeks ranch.

Racket Check Signed 'Hines' Shown in Court

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Sept. 2.—Three more links in a chain of evidence pointing to James J. Hines, veteran Tammany leader, as the protector of Dutch Schultz's policy racket against police and courts were forged in Supreme Court today, the principal link by Max D. Steuer, long-time adviser to the Tammany Hall leadership and noted as a lawyer.

Steuer corroborated the testimony of J. Richard (Dixie) Davis, that Hines sought his intervention with George Z. Medalie, United States district attorney here in 1933, to effect a compromise of the case against Schultz for violating the Federal income tax laws. Steuer said Hines mentioned to him the case of an Arthur Flegenheimer; he learned the man was the gangster, Schultz. Medalie declined to compromise, and he informed Hines he was not interested any further in handling the case.

The two other links in the chain of evidence were provided from records of a telephone conversation obtained by wire tapping, and by the testimony of Mrs. Rose Windruff, a younger sister of "Dixie" Davis.

Records of the wire-tapped telephone conversation, telling of a request by some man named "Jimmy" to Davis for $500, and of Davis' sending the money to the offices of John Dietz, then New York City's assistant commissioner of water supply, gas and electricity, were identified by two men who wrote them. They were Julius Salke, a police department detective, and

Jury Holds 14 in Prison 'Roastings'

Coroner's Inquest Finds Criminal Negligence; High Bail Set.

Warden, Aide, 10 Guards and Two Physicians Named in Verdict.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Sept. 2.—"Criminal negligence" in the "baking" deaths, August 22, of four county prisoners was officially laid today to two top-ranking prison executives and a dozen subordinates, including two physicians. The entire group was held for grand jury action.

After a three-day inquest and two and a half hours' deliberation, a coroner's jury accused of such criminal negligence, Warden William B. Mills, Deputy Warden Frank A. Craven, Guard Capt. James McGuire, Dr. George Enoch and Dr. Hans Abrahams, and Guards Alfred W. Brough, Francis Smith, Edward Corkery, Samuel James, Thomas Cavanaugh, John Mulhern, Sylvester Weaver, William Staines and Robert Morrow.

Released in Bail.

Mills and Craven later were released under $10,000 bail each. Judge Gerald F. Flood set $2,500 bail each for the two physicians and seven guards and $5,000 bail for three other guards. Moments later the Board of County Prison Inspectors suspended all 14 men and placed the prison temporarily in charge of its chief physician, Dr. Frederick S. Baldi.

Assistant District Attorney John A. Boyle, chief inquisitor at the inquiry, in a City Hall courtroom, announced he would seek indictments and an early trial for "each and every one" of those accused today.

When the jury of four business men and two clubwomen announced its findings, the crowd including relatives of the victims, applauded. Craven's wife took a seat beside him and draped an arm around his broad shoulders. Mills puffed a cigar.

The detention of the physicians was a surprise. Deputy Coroner Vincent Moranz, in his charge to the jury asking criminal negligence findings against at least half a dozen prison officers, had not mentioned them.

Dr. Enoch, an elderly visiting physician, had testified he omitted the customary inspection of the 25 men confined in the steaming "Klondike" punishment pen after a hunger strike because Craven told him to "wait." Dr. Abrahams, youthful resident physician, told the jury he had not visited the "oven" cells although he knew the men were there.

Sergeant Exonerated.

Guard Sergt. James Hart, named by Mills and Craven as having given an "unauthorized" order to turn on the heat, was exonerated. The jury agreed with Moranz that Hart may have been under "standing, definite" orders from superiors. He had so testified.

State Secretary of Welfare Charles I. Engard ordered today that the "Klondike" be locked up "until further notice."

Today five technical experts completed 18 hours of self-imposed confinement in the "sweat box." They turned on the steam heat, shut windows and ventilators and re-enacted in modified form the conditions during the tormenting days and nights the prisoners spent there. They took data on heat, air conditions and physical reactions, but did not report their findings.

Tydings, Lewis Renew Feud; Roosevelt for G.O.P. Liberals

Candidate's Heart Put Ahead of Party by the President.

By Sidney Olson.

President Roosevelt yesterday placed the name of "liberal" above that of "Democrat," in a surprise statement indorsing the liberal viewpoint without regard to political affiliation.

He authorized this quotation:

"If there is a good liberal running on the Republican ticket, I will not have the slightest objection to his election.

"The good of the country rises above party."

Getting Set for 1940.

The President's declaration was regarded as further justification of Administration efforts to "purge"—a word he termed yesterday as a misnomer, and immature—conservative Democrats from his own party.

Throughout Washington observers took the view that Mr. Roosevelt's words indicated, more clearly than ever before, the firmness of his intent to make the issue in 1940 the choice between a conservative party and a liberal party, at all costs.

The statement, immediately viewed as of the highest political

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Sept. 2.—Senator Tydings tonight carried to five audiences in widely scattered sections of Maryland's metropolis a call to arms against "the most powerful political machine in history."

Meanwhile 69-year-old Representative Lewis lashed out at Senator Tydings as a supporter of the "old deal." Tydings, he said, had, in the days of "the old deal," been a director of a Baltimore bank whose operations, he alleged, resulted in "the loss of life savings to thousands of Marylanders."

Names Roosevelt.

The New Deal, said Lewis, is the basis of the present campaign. "Shall there be a majority of friends or opponents of the New Deal in Congress?" he asked. "Tydings voted for the old deal, but the days of the old deal are over—they will never come back."

"The old deal which supplied such a heyday for Tydings and his Tory friends almost destroyed honest property and human rights," Lewis declared.

"The Roosevelt program," he de-

Harem Suspicion Brings Arabian, Bride Into Court

New York, Sept. 2 (AP).—A wealthy Arabian youth, Mijib Toonie, and his pretty bride, Doris Hisaw, 17, of Neosho, Mo., surrendered to Federal agents today after they heard they were wanted in St. Louis on a Mann act warrant.

The couple said they were surprised to read newspaper stories that the girl's father, Otis Hisaw, of Kansas City had filed the Mann act charge.

According to Assistant United States Attorney Henry G. Morris, of St. Louis, the girl's parents feared that she was the victim of a "love potion" and would be placed in a Larem.

Son of Roosevelt Must Wait for Pay

Boston, Sept. 2 (U.P.).—John Roosevelt, youngest son of the President, completes his first week as a working man tomorrow, but will have to wait until next Wednesday for his first pay envelope.

Since he started working at $18 weekly in the stock room of the Filene department store's bargain basement, John has kept in the background. He will have to stand in line to get his pay envelope and will find compensation for his first three days of work is held in abeyance. However, if he leaves the store's employ, the pay for his first three days will be forthcoming at that time.

3 in Stolen Car Seized After Wild Chase in Streets

A 75-mile-an-hour chase through the crowded streets of the city's northwest section yesterday led to the capture of three young colored men in a stolen car.

The Auto Squad spotted the car, for which a lookout had been broadcast, shortly before noon on N street, near Fourth street northwest. The driver, alone at the time, apparently recognized Detective Sergt. John Curtis, and speeded at a 75-mile-an-hour pace through Sixth street to Q street. Driven on the wrong side of the street, the car escaped Curtis a block from New York avenue.

Ten minutes later, Curtis said, an anonymous telephone call reported the car had been seen at North Capitol and O streets heading south. Policemen G. W. Tenley and Roy Schulz, in a traffic cruiser, spotted the car and swung in front of it at Fourth and H streets. The driver and two passengers were held for investigation.

Husband Is Held In Pastor's Slaying

Crystal City, Tex., Sept. 2 (AP).—A murder charge was filed today against T. J. Halbert, 60, in the slaying of the Rev. B. G. Holloway, Baptist minister and former Army chaplain.

The minister, next-door neighbor of Halbert and his estranged wife, was shot and killed last night while feeding his chickens. Mrs. Halbert had been employed in the minister's household. Halbert surrendered to City Marshal Dennis Oden soon after the shooting.

Crash Hurts Eight, Ends Liquor Chase

Eight persons, four of them children, were injured last night when a liquor-laden automobile, hotly pursued by revenue officers, crashed into their car at Nichols avenue and Sheridan road southeast. The automobile occupied by the four children immediately burst into flames.

Marion Wood, 19, of 519 Tenth street southeast, an outstanding athlete at Abbott Vocational School. At Casualty with a possible skull fracture and crushed chest.

Struck Car Burns.

Eyewitnesses said an automobile driven by LesCallett and occupied by Wood and the children had backed from a parking space on Nichols avenue near Sheridan road when it was struck by that containing Lee and Dorsey. Its doors flew open and its occupants were dashed to the street. Flames enveloped it at once.

Two revenue officers, in hot pursuit of the colored men, leaped from their machine and handcuffed Dorsey. Meanwhile, Fred LesCallett, 20, Alfred's brother, rushed from across Nichols avenue, where he had just emerged from a store, in time to pull the victims away from the flames. He was aided by other witnesses.

Two of the injured children were hurried to Gallinger Hospital by Miss Fern Lehman, of 3211 Wheeler road, a Gallinger nurse, who was passing in her private automobile. Others were taken to other hospitals by passersby who could identify none of them.

Thrown Under Car.

Alfred LesCallett said last night Wood was sitting on the front seat with him, holding Billy, when the splintering shock came. He was hurled through the top, he said, while one of the children went through the windshield.

U.S. Will List All Agents of Other Lands

Each Must State His Business, Beginning October 6.

The State Department laid plans yesterday for the announcement Tuesday of the new regulations, imposed now for the first time in the Nation's history, under which every agent of a foreign country must register his name and state his business in this country.

The new law goes into effect September 6. Within 30 days thereafter every person acting as an "agent of a foreign principal" must register with the Department or be liable to a $1,000 fine or a two-year jail sentence.

Embassy charwomen, butlers and maids may be as directly subject to the law as attorneys for foreign corporations, it was learned. For under the definition of "agent" is included the word "servant."

Only duly accredited diplomatic or consular representatives are exempted from the law's provisions.

Warns That Employment Must Be Increased; Predicts 'Boom.'

Cheered by increasing employment and an upturn in workers' buying power, the American Federation of Labor yesterday predicted that "recovery will be rapid" if production continues to keep pace with rising consumer and Government spendings.

"Some observers believe that when the large volume Government spending gets under way business increases may reach boom proportions," an A. F. of L. business survey said, but added:

"Union executives should not give opinions of this type too much weight, however, until we see further gains in employment and pay rolls. For as yet the foundation of buying power on which the present recovery rests has not increased greatly, and the future is still uncertain."

Spending Rises Again.

Meanwhile, the Treasury reported another step-up in Government spending expenditures in July and August reached $1,445,227,238, compared with $1,235,107,369 a year ago. Spending was almost double current income, revenue receipts for the two months declining to $798,579,034. This was about $70,000,000 less than a year ago.

Swollen work relief rolls were reflected in the spending figures, with a $365,248,905 outlay by WPA in the two months. WPA rolls reached

Special Cable to The Post.

Prague, Sept. 2.—Lord Runciman intimated tonight the deadlock in negotiations between Czechoslovakia and its 3,500,000 Sudeten Germans had been broken.

In a 53-word communique issued after an hour and a half conference with President Benes, he said "negotiations" between the President and the Sudeten German leaders had taken place during the morning and would be continued Monday.

From another source it was learned Ernst Kundt, the Sudeten negotiator, and Dr. Wilhelm Sebekowsky, the Sudeten propaganda chief, had told President Benes the British plan for settlement of the dispute, although not fully acceptable, would be discussed in further talks. That is as much as the government and the Runciman mission had hoped for.

The full story probably may be told tomorrow, but tonight Konrad Henlein, the Sudeten feuhrer, is on his way back to Czechoslovakia after getting his orders from Reichsfuehrer Hitler at Berchtesgaden. Virginian Admits Shooting Revenue Agent and Deputy Pulaski, Va., Sept. 2 (AP).—Commonwealth's Attorney Alton I. Crowell said J. B. Spencer, bearded 60-year-old mountaineer of the Weldon section of Pulaski County, confessed tonight to the shooting from ambush of T. M. Gravely, an A.B.C. inspector, and Wiley Faw, a Pulaski County deputy sheriff, during a raid on a moonshine still early today.

Spencer was arrested shortly after 5 p. m. at the home of a neighbor, approximately 2 miles from his home and the still where the shooting occurred. Jeff Cox, 70, who had been arrested previously in connection with the shooting, was released.

Man Washed Up by Potomac Believed Fort Belvoir Private

Officers at Fort Belvoir said yesterday they believed the unidentified man whose body was washed ashore near the fort Wednesday night to be Charles Slinkamp, private attached to Company D, Fifth Regiment, Corps of Engineers, who has been A. W. O. L. from the fort since August 22.

Maj. H. R. Cole, post adjutant, explained that identification was not positive. Department of Justice agents and officers at the fort are working on the case, he said, in an effort to establish identification beyond a doubt. The advanced state of decomposition made identification difficult.

Sergt. Jud S. Johnson, of Company D, called at the D. Wheatley Funeral Home in Alexandria, where the body is being held for identification, and expressed belief the body was that of the missing soldier.

Slinkamp reportedly spent last Saturday night in the barracks and thereafter disappeared. He had been A. W. O. L. for five days at that time.

Johnson said the missing soldier was of similar height and build and wore the same size shoe. The partially amputated finger on the left hand and the lack of teeth also corresponded.

C. A. Ransom, Fairfax County coroner, who performed an autopsy on the body, said the man could have committed suicide, despite the broken neck, which may have occurred long after he was dead.

"I do know, however," he said, "that he did not die of drowning, since there was no water in the lungs."

Slinkamp had a service record extending back 22 years. He recently had been denied a transfer to Hawaii, and reportedly had been despondent on this account.

Johnson said the cast iron bar with which the unidentified man's body was weighted down in the water apparently was from one of the manhole covers at the fort. The rope by which the bar was tied to the neck was obviously "tent cord."

World Crisis Keeps Roosevelt at Home

Fletcher, N. C. Labor Expert, Will Apply Wage-Hour Law

By Robert C. Albright.

Arthur L. Fletcher, North Carolina labor commissioner, yesterday was named assistant Federal wage-hour administrator as the wage and hour division of the Labor Department groomed itself for an initial trial of the new law.

A labor plea for a 40-cent floor under textile wages, meanwhile, foreshadowed controversy in the first industry selected for application of the act. Francis C. Gorman, president of United Textile Workers of America, said textile workers will not accept a 30-cent minimum.

Fletcher's appointment was announced by Wage-Hour Administrator Elmer F. Andrews, who said he will direct compliance activities. He said other organization details are being worked out. Andrews is expected to name a 21-man textile industrial committee, to map initial regulations for the textile industry, when he returns next week from his Albany, N. Y. home.

District Moves To Cut Car Toll Over Holiday

Extra Police Will Watch Heavily-Traveled Arteries.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Traffic crashes in Washington and vicinity killed 11 persons over the Labor Day week-end last year. Across the Nation, 280 persons—a new holiday record—were sacrificed to speed and highway recklessness.

This year, mindful of past tragedies, safety exponents have launched the greatest life-saving program in motoring history.

From coast to coast appeals and demands for driving caution have gone out to the thousands of motorists expected to take advantage of the final summer holiday.

Washington, already in the middle of a vigorous accident prevention movement, was quick to recognize Labor Day traffic dangers and today joins the country-wide offensive against highway slaughter.

Hazen Makes Appeal.

With an appeal to District residents who plan to spend a portion of their holidays on the open road, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen issued the following statement:

"It is my hope and prayer that our citizens enjoy safe and sane motoring over the coming week-end. I remind them of current efforts to cut the city's casualty toll and urge strict observance of safe driving rules."

Special precautions will be taken today on all main arteries leading from the city. Capt. Milton D. Smith, commander of the police traffic division, announced that augmented motorcycle patrols will be used to curb speed and negligence as the anticipated volume of heavy traffic leaves and enters the District.

On Monday the same special patrols will be used to enforce safety regulations against homeward-bound motorists.

"In this manner," said Capt. Smith, "we hope to protect our drivers and see that they bring themselves and families back alive."

Common Sense Urged.

The safety appeals were joined by Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, chairman of the Commissioners' traffic advisory committee. He said:

"It is the hope of my committee that our work to bring an improvement in Washington's traffic problem will not be undone over the coming holiday period. We sincerely appeal for common sense and a share of responsibility on the part of all motorists and pedestrians."

And as record Labor Day safety activities spread, an elderly woman, believed to be Washington's sixty-first traffic victim of the year, died in St. Elizabeths Hospital.

Injured slightly in a mishap August 20, Mrs. Julia E. Jones, 60, succumbed to an infected injury to her nose. She was thrown against the windshield of a car while riding with her son, Thomas Jones, of 2310 Thirty-ninth street northwest.

The accident occurred at Half and M streets southwest and Mrs. Jones was released from Providence Hospital after first-aid treatment. She was later taken to St. Elizabeths, where she died. Police said her death would be added to the traffic list, although Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald has not announced results of an autopsy.

Warnings Issued.

In addition to the holiday motoring exodus, airlines, bus companies and railroads reported the heaviest advance reservations in recent years. Extra transportation facilities are being added to accommodate crowds.

Both the Keystone Automobile Club and American Automobile Association issued special holiday warnings against highway hazards.

Edward F. Curran, safety director of Keystone, urged motorists to make use of secondary routes and side roads in their travels to shore and country resorts.

"By distributing the traffic load over many highways," he said, "congestion will be lessened and hazards due to overcrowding likewise will be greatly reduced."

Appeal for Safety.

In urging extra care and caution during Labor Day travels, the AAA stressed importance of "getting ahead of the other fellow" by early departures and returns.

In a telegram addressed to "the motoring public," and expected to reach 60,000,000 persons throughout the country, Clinton B. Allsopp, vice president of Postal Telegraph, cooperating with the National Safety Council, issued a warning to "make safety first this week-end." The telegram, posted in telegraph office windows, read:

"Speed belongs to communications channels. Join us who serve the traveling public in a safe holiday crusade over the Labor Day week-end."

The National Safety Council, in a Nation-wide safety bulletin, cited last September's accident toll of 9,580 lives, the majority credited to highway mishaps, and described the Labor Day week-end as the "most dangerous end-of-the-summer period."

Said W. H. Cameron, managing director of the council:

"In thousands of homes each year, tragedy closes the summer vacation period. This year let's be extra careful. It will save suffering and heartaches. Don't let an accident spoil your good time."

Safety Body Issues Don'ts for Drivers

The Washington Post and Junior Board of Commerce traffic safety institute suggests the following safety rules for motorists over the Labor Day week-end:

Watch out for the "other fellow."

Always signal your intentions to stop and turn.

Drive in your own traffic lane—don't weave.

Refrain from passing on curves and hills.

Obey ALL traffic rules and stay alive.

Dutchess County Jury Finds Relief Cost Unbearable

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Sept. 2.—The Dutchess County grand jury which has been inquiring into the county's relief problems all summer cleared officials and employes of any wrong-doing or neglect today but criticized the relief system itself as being a "burden scarcely to be borne."

The grand jury appealed to the board of supervisors and legislators in Albany to hasten enactment of laws returning administration of relief to the 20 townships in the county in which President Roosevelt lives.

The jury reported it was "of the opinion that the cost of relief in Duchess County can be materially lessened by each town's administering relief to its own residents."

Sons Force Iceman, 83, To Forego Pet Ambition

Cleveland, Sept. 2. (U.P.).—George Myer, 83-year-old iceman who wanted to peddle ice until he was 90, hung up his tongs tonight, saying, "Guess I am through."

Myer had delivered ice for more than 50 years, and never had been sick or missed a day. He quit, not because he couldn't hustle a big piece of ice "as well as any of these college football fellows," but because his sons insisted he was too old.

District Flag Still Furled as the Fine Art Body Ponders

Another knot in its halyards yesterday blocked the District's official flag from being flung to the breeze.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen was notified by the Fine Arts Commission it wanted to have a look at all designs before one is finally accepted. Hazen, a member of the Flag Commission, had sent the Fine Arts group only two designs, which were approved.

Now the Fine Arts Commission wants them all, a total of about 50. They also said no decision would be rendered on their worthiness to represent the District until all Commissioners are back from vacation.

Cloudburst Hits Colorado Resort

Morrison, Colo., Sept. 2 (U.P.).—A 6-foot wall of water roared through this summer resort 15 miles southwest of Denver tonight after a sudden mountain cloudburst sent three creeks over their banks.

The State highway patrol said 12 persons were stranded on a small island near Idledale. Efforts to rescue them were started but Joseph Marsh, patrol supervisor, said he thought little progress would be made until daylight.

General heavy rains in the mountains west of Denver sent scores of creeks and bridges to high levels.

Fiftieth Aero Squadron Is Host To Mother of Boy Left Behind

Mrs. Upton Tells Son's Buddies War Is 'Useless Tragedy.'

A Gold Star mother, whose only son plunged to his death in a plane in France 20 years ago, came to Washington on a solitary pilgrimage yesterday, to meet the men who were his "buddies" before his last take-off overseas.

And, as the world resounded with the rumors of wars and bristled with armaments and planes of a death-dealing efficiency inconceivable two decades past, Mrs. A. A. Upton, of Arlington, Mass., warned the mothers of all nations against war.

"No blaring bands or thudding drums can bring back the beloved dead," said she. "War is a useless tragedy."

Mrs. Upton is the mother of the late Lieut. Charles H. Upton, of the Fiftieth Aero Squadron—the outfit that brought aid to Maj. Whittlesly's "Lost Battalion" in the Argonne Forest in the closing days of the war. She will be the guest of veterans of the squadron, who will begin their reunion here today at the Continental Hotel.

She is the first Gold Star mother ever to attend a reunion of the group. In the family plot at her Massachusetts home her son lies buried. Through the years she had recalled the last letters he had written. Hhe spoke of the camaraderie of the squadron, of his friends and of life in the skies. Then, on August 28, 1918, he crashed and was killed.

Twenty years later Mrs. Upton, steeped in her memories of the vigorous little boy who grew up to be a soldier, read of the forthcoming reunion here.

She wrote to Milton K. Lockwood, of Mount Vernon, former lieutenant in the outfit and chairman of the affair, and asked if it would be proper for her to come. Lockwood invited her as guest of the squadron, which will carry a wreath Monday to Mount Vernon, where it will be placed in homage to George Washington.

MRS. A. A. UPTON.

As the first of the 150 delegates from all sections of the country began arriving in Washington yesterday, Mrs. Upton sat in her room at the Y. W. C. A., and in her memory the leaves of many calendars fluttered back.

"I suppose I am a bit out of place," said she. "But I feel close to my son here because I am close to his friends."

Lieut. Upton was born in 1893, and spent a New England boyhood at sports and in school.

"Mother, I've enlisted in the aviation, and I'm going," he said one day.

"I'm with a splendid group," Lieut. Upton wrote by candlelight to his mother the night before his death.

When Mrs. Upton returns to Arlington, she will revisit her son's grave as a symbol of her journey to Washington to meet the friends he made in the face of danger long ago.

"These men are, I guess, by proxy, all my boys," she sighed.

GHQ Air Force Will Be Moved To Scott Field

Secretary of War Harry L. Woodring yesterday announced plans for the expenditure of $4,857,400 to expand and develop Scott Field, Ill., as headquarters station of the General Headquarters Air Force.

Maj. Gen. Frank M. Andrews, commander of the G. H. Q. Air Force, will move the headquarters units from Langley Field, Va., to Scott Field as soon as the new buildings can be completed. The headquarters of the second wing and the various units of that wing will remain at Langley Field, it was said.

"At Scott Field," officials explained, "the headquarters of the G. H. Q. Air Force will be more strategically located than at present. The headquarters personnel will be within a few hours' flying distance of all the combat elements of the Air Corps in continental United States. The transfer will place the command of the G. H. Q. Air Force more nearly at the geographical center of the United States, instead of on the Atlantic Coast as at present."

To Improve Post.

To provide suitable quarters the plans provide for the entire rebuilding of the post at Scott Field. Of Georgian design, the Administration Building, barracks and hospital will be fireproof.

The hangar and industrial buildings will be of steel frame construction. Extensive runways and the other facilities needed at modern air terminals also will be built.

Included in the project are plans for the dismantling of the airship hangar now on the field and the airship mooring mast, both of which would be flying hazards in the operation of heavier-than-air craft. A water tank and sewage system, electrical distribution system and heating plant also will be provided.

To Erect Quarters.

Buildings, on which work soon will begin, are two barracks to house 330 enlisted men; quarters for 32 noncommissioned officers; quarters for 62 married officers and 10 bachelor officers; a hangar and repair shops; quartermaster utilities, including warehouse, garages, gasoline and oil storage; a fire and guard house; ordnance magazine and a gymnasium, which will include a service club and post exchange.

Organizations already stationed at Scott Field are the Twenty-first Balloon Group Headquarters; Fifteenth Observation Squadron; Base Headquarters and Seventh Base Squadron; Detachments of Ordnance, Signal Corps, Finance Department, Medical Department and Quartermaster Corps.

Lindbergh Taxis All Over Airport Fleeing Welcome

Prague, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh entertained Prague with some unexpected airplane stunts today when he landed here from Olmuetz, where foggy weather had held him overnight.

As he was taxiing after landing here with Mrs. Lindbergh, the American flier twice raced his plane across the field with four automobiles bearing Czechoslovak and American officials in pursuit.

Not fast enough to escape them, the Colonel taxied to the other end of the field.

There, still wearing his flying helmet, he jumped into the automobile of Maj. Lowell Riley, military attache of the United States Legation here.

Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh were taken to the American Legation. They were expected to leave tomorrow to continue the aerial tour of Europe which brought them here from Cluj, Rumania.

Frisco Mayor's Plea Averts Strike

San Francisco, Sept. 2 (U.P.).—Union retail store clerks and representatives of 27 large department stores agreed today to resume contract negotiations after Mayor Rossi pleaded with them to avoid a strike by the 7,000 workers.

Mayor Rossi called a conference after retailers rejected the union compromise proposal on demands for a 35-hour, five-day week, seniority and preferential hiring.

Pleading with spokesmen for the groups, Rossi said a strike would "bring untold damage to San Francisco." The American Federation of Labor Retail Clerk's Union accepted the mayor's invitation to "one more meeting," and the retailers' council later announced agreement.

Alabama WPA Strikes Evacuated by Police

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 2 (A.P.).—A 24-hour sit-down strike at Works Progress Administration headquarters ended late today when Birmingham police evacuated 100 strikers by invoking municipal health and fire hazard ordinances.

The men walked into the PWA headquarters and started the strike Thursday in protest against discontinuance of bus transportation to a project on which they had been working.

Throwing Flowers At Hitler Forbidden

Berlin, Sept. 2 (U.P.).—Throwing flowers at Fuehrer Hitler during the Nazi Party congress at Nuremberg next week was prohibited tonight.

The organization committee for the congress said throwing bouquets at Hitler or his entourage, particularly while they were driving along in automobiles, might endanger the party.

The committee also announced that no one will be permitted to approach Hitler's automobile.

Real Income Turns Up After 8 Months' Fall

But July Net Is Still 21 Per Cent Below Year Ago.

Minneapolis, Sept. 2.—The "real income" of the average consumer in July, for the first time in eight months, increased rather than decreased from the preceding monthly period, according to a monthly study of what people get and spend, made public here today by Investors Syndicate.

This cent gain between June and July, 1938, in "real income" is an encouraging reversal of trend, after eight months of steady deflation. This fact, taken with other signs of business betterment, gives promise of further gains to come, the study says.

Wages during July were 67 cents compared with a dollar in July, 1937. Wages in June were 65 cents on the dollar of a year earlier. Salaries during July were 84 cents against a dollar in the same 1937 month, but salaries in June were 83 cents compared with a dollar in June, 1937.

Investment income, chiefly dividend and interest payments, during July were 71 cents contrasted with a dollar in the same month of last year. This item in June was 73 cents against a dollar in the same month a year earlier.

The flow of cash to farms in return for this year's bumper crops largely influenced "other income," which in July stood at 87 cents compared with one dollar in the same month a year ago.

As these four types of cash income are shared by consumers as a whole, the average cash income in July, 1938, was 75 cents, compared with one dollar in July, 1937.

All living costs in July, 1938, were 96 cents compared with one dollar in the like 1937 month. The same amount of food could be purchased for 93 cents in July, 1938, as one dollar would buy in July, 1937. Housing accommodations that could be had for a dollar in July, 1937, could be had for 99 cents during July this year. And a long list of miscellaneous items costing one dollar in July last year could be obtained for 95 cents this year. Clothing likewise was 5 cents lower on the dollar than in July, 1937.

The difference between the cash income of the average consumer, 75 cents at the start of August, 1938, against $1 a year earlier, and his cash outgo, 96 cents against $1 a year earlier, is his "real income" of 79 cents. This "real income" of 79 cents is not a mere subtraction of cash income from cash outgo, which would be an index of savings rather than real income, but an average relative figure of income and outgo designed to show how the cost of living affects the adjusted dollar income.

Cleveland's Sister Lights 95th Candle

It was the first time in 20 years her five children had been together for her birthday, and she was so excited she said she'd rather not make her customary birthday statement this year about world affairs.

"Besides," she laughed, "I don't know anything I could say this year that hasn't been said before."

31 Pupils Strike To Reopen School

Knoxville, Tenn., Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Thirty-one youngsters of the Woodlawn community near here went on a sit-down strike today seeking to force the county board of education to reopen the little one-room frame school which has served the neighborhood more than half a century.

The school was closed last year and the students provided with a bus to take them 2½ miles to a modern junior high. But the pupils refused to ride the bus and remained on strike nearly two weeks until the school was reopened.

Gov. Earle Orders State Police to Disregard Letter Asking Campaign Donations.

By the Associated Press.

Harrisonburg, Pa., Sept. 2.—Gov. George H. Earle today instructed all Pennsylvania State policemen to disregard a letter he said was sent from Democratic State headquarters urging campaign contributions.

GOV. EARLE.

"Yesterday the Democratic State headquarters sent letters to members of the Pennsylvania State police urging them to contribute to the Democratic Party," Gov. Earle said at a press conference.

"I have kept all politics out of our State police and as a result we have the finest police force in the world.

"I herewith order all members of the State police to disregard the State committee's letter."

Donald A. Callahan, Idaho Republican Senatorial nominee, reported to the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee that he had made no expenditures nor received any donations since the August 9 primary. He had previously reported expenditure of $731.57 and no contributions in his campaign for the nomination. Howard E. Foster, Seattle, told the committee he had spent $44.48 thus far in his campaign for the Washington Republican Senatorial nomination. Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, advised the committee he had received contributions of $4,496 and spent $6,707.38 in his campaign for re-election.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—Senator Prentiss M. Brown (Democrat), Michigan, chairman of the Senate Campaign Committee, told the Grand Rapids Press his committee would be willing to consider any representations that Sheridan Downey, of California, Democratic Senatorial nominee, does not support his party's principles. Downey defeated Senator McAdoo for the nomination in the Democratic primary in California this week.

Brown said there was no question but that his committee would support Senator Smith, in South Carolina, who won renomination despite Administration opposition.

Columbus, Nebr.—The platform committee of the Nebraska Democratic convention gave President Roosevelt a word of encouragement in what members called his effort to "purge" Congress.

"We send greetings to a brave and courageous leader," the statement said, "engaged in the stern task of perpetuating liberal democratic ideals in government, and reaffirm our faith in him and in the cause which he represents. . . . In recent months, those elements which opposed the President have been calling for an independent Congress. What they desire is not an independent Congress, but a reactionary Congress to thwart and defeat the President."

Tacoma, Wash.—The Seattle Broadcasting Co.'s $250,000 damage suit against Senator Homer T. Bone, Saul Haas, United States collector of internal revenue, and others was dismissed on stipulation of counsel. The company accused Bone of using his influence as a member of the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce to further a conspiracy to compel the Columbia Broadcasting System to terminate its contract with Station KOL, operated by the plaintiff, and give it to Station KIRO, operated by the Queen City Broadcasting Co., one of the defendants, in which Bone was alleged to have an interest.

St. Louis, Sept. 2.—Secretary of State Ed Clark, of Texas, said he would "welcome" any investigation into his refusal to certify the name of Representative Maury Maverick as an independent candidate for Congress in the general election. Maverick was defeated for the nomination.

Clark disclosed he had exchanged telegrams with Representative Keller (Democrat), Illinois, following his announcement that Maverick was not eligible to run as an independent. However, Keller made no mention of a congressional investigation, Clark said.

Los Angeles — Senator James Hamilton Lewis (Democrat) Illinois, said California's primary election results are symptomatic of a break-up of national political parties throughout the Nation. He alluded to the part in the campaign by the $30-every-Thursday pension plan. "There are not national political parties left in the Nation," he said. "I think this began with Upton Sinclair's 'Epic' program in 1934."

Brooklynite 'Find' Of GoldwynTurns OutAlienAfterAll

Los Angeles, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Sigrid Gurie, whom Samuel Goldwyn, movie producer, tried to publicize as a Norwegian "find," although she was born in Brooklyn, really is not a United States citizen, Federal immigration officials informed her today.

Miss Gurie asked for passport to go to London, where she is to make a sequel to "Marco Polo," her first Hollywood starring vehicle. She was informed that although she was born in this country and lived here a few years immediately thereafter, a 67-year-old treaty with Norway, the land her parents, decrees she is Norwegian.

"I can't understand it," said the actress. "If the Government hold that being born in Brooklyn does not entitle me to American citizenship, I shall ask permission to re-enter under a quota number. I want this to be my home for the rest of my life."

California Bans Group Medicine Run for Profits

San Francisco, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—A divided State Supreme Court decided today that a health corporation sponsoring a socialized medicine plan for profit could not legally operate in California.

Three of the seven judges dissented. At the same time, the court approved the co-operative health service system established in San Francisco by charter amendment which would furnish medical care to city employes, teachers and their dependents for specified compulsory monthly contributions.

The majority opinion in the Pacific Health Corporation case held "it is an established doctrine that a corporation may not engage in the practice of such professions as law, medicine or dentistry."

Buenos Aires In Good-Will Series on Radio

Foreign Minister Praises U. S. in First Speech on Program.

Jose Maria Cantilo, foreign minister of Argentina, inaugurated a series of weekly broadcasts from South America to the entire Western Hemisphere yesterday in an address expressing the hope "that the English-speaking nations become better acquainted with us."

"We owe a debt of gratitude which gladly will be kept in the forefront of our minds," he said, "to the country whose independence was obtained by Washington, whose fine tenets were molded by Franklin, Jefferson and Madison."

Cantilo's speech was transmitted from Buenos Aires by short-wave and was rebroadcast in English from Washington on a Nation-wide network by the National Broadcasting Company. The address was broadcast also in Portuguese, French and Spanish.

"We should like our friendships strengthened by a closer union born of a better acquaintance and mutual appreciation," Cantilo said. Addressing himself to all American nations, Cantilo said he hoped they would find in the series of goodwill broadcasts "a new pledge of peace."

A means of avoiding competitive radio "dumping" by short-wave transmission was seen here yesterday in the arrangement with the N. B. C. for domestic broadcast of the Argentine program. Observers here thought that reciprocal agreements may be worked out by which Latin American countries might rebroadcast for the ordinary long-wave sets within their own borders, programs originating in the United States in return for similar American distribution of programs instituted by the Latin American nations.

Japan Toy Exports Fall 37 Per Cent

A report to the Commerce Department disclosed yesterday that Japanese toy exports declined 37 per cent in the first half of this year. The report made no mention of the effect of anti-Japanese boycotts but said one hindrance to the toy business is the difficulty in obtaining raw materials required by the army in China.

Kennedy Begs For Survival Of Democracy

Guard Civil Rights at Home to Preserve Peace, He Urges England.

By Frank Kelly.
Special Cable to The Post.

London, Sept. 2.—A vigorous appeal to the democracies to safeguard freedom of worship and other civil liberties as the pillars of their existence and the means of preventing war was made today by Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy.

In a speech this afternoon at Aberdeen Cathedral, after he had laid the cornerstone of a memorial to Dr. Samuel Seabury, the Aberdonian who became the first Protestant Episcopal Bishop of the United States, the Ambassador declared:

"We owe it to the great mass of the people of our countries and other countries, to our children and theirs, to leave no avenue unexplored in our efforts to prevent war. Certainly the peoples of the world do not want to fight each other. Their leaders say that they themselves do not want war unless they are forced into it.

Asks "Common Sense."

"In such circumstances it ought not to be beyond the reach of human intelligence to prevent the disaster everyone seems to fear. I believe it can be done by the application of the principles we have been discussing—by faith, by spiritual courage, by loyalty to right dealing and by the exercise of common sense."

Kennedy's plea came as tension over Czechoslovakia continued in the world's capitals. It was made, too, at a time when the British government was looking for authoritative words of encouragement from the United States in connection with its stand against the dictatorships in general, and on the Czech issue in particular.

Without naming Germany or Italy as his target, Kennedy contrasted the persecution of Jews and members of other faiths with the freedom of worship as in the western nations. He also referred indirectly to the attacks on religion in Russia and other parts of the world.

"We can, and must," he warned, "be eternally on guard that our own nations do not swerve from the path of free living . . . the preservation of the essentials of democracy is as precious a goal in Scotland as it is in the United States.

Cites Other Liberties.

"It would appear safe at this moment to predict that freedom of religion is beyond attack in our countries . . .

"There are other civil liberties which are only slightly, if at all, less precious. Freedom of speech, freedom of peaceable assembly, the right to trial by jury, protection against unreasonable search and seizure, and the other rights which we associate with citizenship are worthy of our most ardent defense . . .

"The most important thing is that we still admit and treasure the principles that these freedoms are inalienable from the individual. No state and no political organization can take them away from him. It is this conception of the right of man which marks off the democracies from other forms of political life and it is this conception to which we must cling if we are to go on living as we have been accustomed to live and as we want to live."

"Some of the nations of the world are involved in disputes both internal and external. The rest of us are anxiously watching from the sidelines, doing what little we can through consultations and forbearance and above all, the avoidance of war, for that is a principle on which we can all agree."

Hell to Cut Loose, Says Italian Seer

Faenza, Italy, Sept. 2 (U.P.).—All hell is going to break loose in Europe on the fifteenth of this month, according to Raffaele Bendandi, world-famous astronomer and prophet, but it will be due to sunspots—not to diplomats and politicians.

Bendandi announced that the most important formation of sunspots of this country are going to break out in a rash on September 15, causing thunder and lightning storms, meteoric showers and a spectacular aurora borealis.

Bendandi, a former wood carver, educated himself in astronomy and seismography and became world-famous as a prophet of earthquakes. He forecast an earthquake at Avezzena, Italy, in 1915, and also forecast the Tokyo earthquake in 1923, and the Santa Barbara, Calif., earthquake of 1925.

Prince Arthur, Kin of Victoria, Is Critically Ill

London, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Prince Arthur of Connaught, 55-year-old grandson of Queen Victoria, is critically ill at his London home. He has been suffering severely from a gastric ailment.

A bulletin issued tonight by Lord Dawson of Penn, physician in ordinary to King George VI, and Sir Russell Wilkinson, Prince Arthur's physician, said:

"The prince, whose health has been causing anxiety for some weeks, is now losing strength."

The prince, one of the least known members of the British royal family, has taken no part in public life for the past two years.

Hankow Drive Is Hurled Back In Fierce Fight

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Saturday), Sept. 3.—Gen. Chiang today threw 200,000 fresh troops into savage counter-attacks on Japanese land forces pressing toward his provisional capital in Hankow, in a vigorous effort to prevent the Japanese from consolidating their newly won positions.

The Hankow war office claimed major successes and said the Japanese had been entirely cleared from the key sectors of Tehan and Matowchen, southeast of the Hankow tri-city area. In the vital Juichang section, it was claimed, the Japanese had been driven back from their advanced posts, which earlier this week were within 90 miles of Hankow. The Chinese were unable to recapture Juichang itself, however, as the Japanese hurriedly brought up strong reinforcements.

Other developments:

In Chungking the Chinese foreign office "regretfully" announced it had been unable to pay for damage inflicted by Chinese war aviators on the U. S. Donnal liner President Hoover off Shanghai more than a year ago and promised a public statement on the American claims soon.

The Japanese navy announced a big Japanese navy flying boat "crashed into an enemy position southwest of Anking, capital of Anhwei province, on July 31 while returning to its base during bad weather. All aboard, including Vice Admiral Jintaro Kato, Commander Michio Kondo and Capt. Soji Oide, were killed. Their bodies were recovered."

Chinese and Japanese reports agreed the Japanese land drive on Hankow had been halted on all fronts except north of the Taipeh Mountains, where the Chinese said Japan's vanguard was 25 miles west of Liuan, Anhwei province. The Japanese claimed this column had crossed into Honan province and was advancing toward the Peiping-Hankow Railway, which will be cut north of Hankow.

Plea Published For American Rights in China

Nullification of Open Door Japan's Goal, Shanghai Groups Tell Hull.

Special Cable to The Post.

Shanghai, Sept. 2.—The demands of the American Chamber of Commerce and the American Community Committee, made in a formal representation to Secretary of State Hull a week ago, were published here today.

With emphasis placed on respect for and observance of all American treaty rights, the organizations charged flatly that Japan's goal is the nullification of the traditional "open door" policy in China. The text of the cabled document:

"Americans in Shanghai, alarmed over steady progress realization Japanese plans to oust American and other trade from China by means monopolies, trade and travel restrictions, control of commodities, exchange control, currency manipulation, as already in effect in North China, and crippling most important lines of American trade there, convinced present is time for America to take firm stand insist on.

"Restoration to Shanghai Municipal Council full authority and control International Settlement including Hongkew Yangtzepoo sections;

"Restoration of American homes, institutions, business properties and goods to rightful owners with full and free access to and use thereof and prompt indemnification for losses;

"Immediate return of equipment and resumption of dredging operations Whangpoo River, Shanghai Harbor, in accordance with international agreements;

"Restoration of full rights and privileges of trade, travel and residence in Yangtze Valley, north China, and other areas, including the use of railways, shipping, commercial airways and motor highways, with access to markets and mission centers on basis equal opportunity;

"Due respect for and observance of all American treaty rights.

"We further urge support of all practical measures to limit scope of hostilities in their disastrous effects on civilian communities and to prevent possible ultimate spread of conflagration to other quarters of the world.

"Request every effort secure prompt consideration of foregoing and urgent necessity for firm stand at this time as vital to protection of American interests present and future."

Britain to Build Plane Plants In Canada, Fly Product Home

Factories at Montreal and Toronto to Be Set Up Now as Assembly Units, Later to Be Converted Into Strategic Manufacturing Bases.

By the Canadian Press.

Ottawa, Sept. 2.—The British High Commissioner to Canada, Sir Francis Floud, announced tonight two big aircraft manufacturing plants will be erected in Canada to furnish warplanes for Great Britain.

One plant is to be built at St. Hubert Airport, near Montreal, the other at Malton Airport, near Toronto.

At first the units will serve only as assembly plants with motors imported from Great Britain or other sources, said Sir Francis, but later it is planned to develop the plants into factories.

It is intended the planes will be flown to Britain upon completion.

"The United Kingdom representatives also are discussing with Canadian aircraft firms, subject to confirmation, arrangements for placing contracts for the manufacture of other types of aircraft for the United Kingdom government at other centers—Vancouver and Fort William," the High Commissioner's announcement said.

Two groups of Canadian firms are to back the new factories.

Victor M. Drury, slated to be a director of the organization, said it would be capitalized at $1,250,000.

A British air mission has been negotiating in Canada for several weeks to arrange an aircraft source which would have a strategic advantage over factories on the British Isles.

The St. Hubert plant is to be built by Canadian Vickers, Ltd.; Canada Car & Foundry, Ltd., and Fairchild, Ltd., all of Montreal. The Malton plant will be constructed by the National Steel Car Corporation, Fleet Aircraft, Ltd., and the Ottawa Car Manufacturing Co., Ltd.

Rebels Resume Ebro Offensive, Claiming Gains

Loyalist Loss Held Raised to 17,000; Miaja's Mine Drive Halted.

By the United Press.

Hendaye, France, Sept. 2.—Gen. Franco's troops struck savagely along the Ebro front today in a sudden resumption of the stalled eastern offensive.

At the same time Franco's warplanes bombed and machine-gunned Loyalist coast cities.

Franco's Zaragoza headquarters announced attacks along the Ebro River in northeast Spain were successful, bringing recent Loyalist losses to 17,000 men, including 12,000 prisoners.

Franco ordered resumption of the Ebro River drive after his southwest army blocked the government offensive on the Estremadura front. Insurgent reports said the Loyalists continued attacking around Castuera, Cabez de Buey and Campa Ario, in southwestern Spain, but were "repeatedly driven back."

Furious plane activity continued on both sides, the insurgents concentrating on loyalist towns in the northeast. Five German Junkers type planes dropped 30 bombs on St. Feliu de Guixols, 50 miles up the coast from Barcelona, destroying 25 buildings and damaging 34.

The populace was warned in time and took to the mountains.

Gibraltar, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—A British warship was placed on emergency duty tonight when a number of insurgent warships cruised near the Spanish government destroyer Jose Luis Diez, crippled in a naval engagement with the insurgents August 27.

Officer Who Broke Puerto Rican Plot Escapes Fusillade

Ponce, Puerto Rico, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—An attempt on the life of a United States marshal was disclosed today while the government was in the midst of trials of nine nationalists charged with firing at Gov. Blanton Winship last July 25.

Police said the marshal, Donald A. Draughon, on duty in San Juan since 1934, was attacked by a group of unidentified men as he drove alone Tuesday night. He escaped injury although the attackers fired a bullet through his automobile's fender.

Draughon, a native of Louisiana, was active two years ago in an investigation which resulted in conviction of eight nationalists of conspiracy to overthrow American rule on the island.

By the Associated Press.

The Justice Department said it was advised yesterday a group of unidentified men had fired upon Donald Draughon, United States marshal at San Juan, Puerto Rico, who escaped injury. He is conducting an investigation but has made no arrests.

Mussolini Bars Italian Schools to Jewish Students

Rome, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Jews were ordered excluded today from State-recognized schools and universities as Premier Mussolini took another step in his avowed determination to "march straight ahead" in application of the Fascist race doctrine.

A decree, effective October 16, approved at a cabinet meeting over which Il Duce presided provided for dismissal of Jewish officials, teachers and students from all schools whose diplomas are recognized by the State.

In elementary schools Jews even were barred from being janitors or custodians.

Jews also were ousted from learned academies, institutes and associations of letters, arts and sciences.

An exception was made for those who already have started their university studies. They will be permitted, under special circumstances, to continue until graduation.

The decree, which followed an order yesterday for the expulsion of all Jews who settled in Italy after the World War, indicated that other curtailment of Jews' cultural activities would be imposed by the Fascist Grand Council which meets October 1.

Interlaken, Switzerland, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—The world assembly of the Oxford Group today sent a telegram to Lord Runciman assuring him of the support "in your unparalleled opportunity" for reconciliation of Czechoslovakia's minorities dispute.

The communication to Britain's unofficial mediator in the Czechoslovak-Sudeten negotiations bore the approval of 2,000 delegates representing 40 countries, including 30 American delegates.

14 Navy Bombers Land in Coco Solo

Coco Solo, Canal Zone, Sept. 2 (U.P.). Fourteen Navy patrol bombers landed here today from the Gulf of Fonseca, 580 miles north of Coco Solo, off the Honduras coast, where they spent the night on a flight from San Diego. The first plane landed at 1:30 p. m.

The planes left San Diego on Wednesday on a projected nonstop flight to the base here. Strong headwinds reduced their fuel supply and they were forced to land on Fonseca Gulf.

Corrigan's Plane Sputters, Gets Off

New York, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—The engine which propelled Douglas Corrigan safely across the Atlantic to Ireland sputtered today as the flier took off from Roosevelt Field on a flight to Pittsburgh.

Corrigan sped the famous $900 "crate" along the runway into a northeast wind at 11 a. m. (Eastern standard time). With its load of 40 gallons of gasoline, it left the runway smoothly.

At an altitude of 100 feet the engine missed. Corrigan swung the ship to the right in a steep bank, apparently to attempt an emergency landing on the field.

Then the engine picked up smoothly again, and the plane, gaining altitude, headed straight west for Pittsburgh.

Czech Deadlock Ends as Hitler, Henlein Confer

Hitler

an idea of what the answer would be when he issued his communique tonight. Coming out at an exceptionally late hour, it said:

"When the president of the republic received Lord Runciman at 5 p. m. today he informed Lord Runciman that he had met the delegates of the Sudeten German Party today and that the negotiations continued from 10:30 a. m. until 2:30 p. m. They have been adjourned until Monday morning, when the discussion will be resumed."

The clear implication was that a basis for negotiation and discussion had been provided by the British plan for division of the country into 23 semi-autonomous cantons, for it was the hope of the British mission that some basis would be found before Hitler spoke at the National Socialist Party congress at Nuremburg.

Yet, publicly, the Nazi Party was making no effort to calm uneasy minds. Karl Hermann Frank, deputy leader of the party, and head of its radical wing, did not accompany Kundt when he went to see the president. Dr. Sebekowsky, a middle-of-the-roader, took his place, and this afternoon Frank presided at a meeting of the party's parliamentary club and saw to it that a resolution was adopted saying the club held fast to the party's original eight demands contained in Henlein's Carlsbad speech.

Negotiators Backed.

Still the club, which includes the 36 Nazi members of Parliament, and a few other leading Nazis, was not expected to show signs of weakness by yielding on these demands. It made up for this by voting confidence in the party's negotiators, headed by Kundt.

If today's meeting with Benes can be called a negotiation, it put an end to a deadlock that began 16 days ago, when Kundt said, in 3,000 words, that an unbridgeable gap separated the demands of his party from the government's proposal. It also demonstrates that the Nazi leaders like the sound of the British plan far better than that of the original government offer.

They are, however, expected to continue their fight in negotiation for the eight demands, which call for autonomy for all the Sudeten land and repeal of Czechoslovakia's alliance with Soviet Russia.

Berlin Indicates Calm.

Special Cable to The Post.

Berlin, Sept. 2.—Developments in the Reich today point to a further relaxation of tension in the Czech-German dispute, though the present "pause" may prove but a calm before another storm.

At Berchtesgaden, Konrad Henlein conferred again with Reichsfuehrer Hitler before departing in the afternoon, apparently for Prague. Arriving overnight from the capital, Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop also participated in the conversation.

The present Czech plan is unacceptable to Hitler but he is believed to be sending Henlein back with instructions to continue the negotiations—and to make it clear that the negotiations "must get a move on."

There is no reason to believe that the German dictator will make any substantial concessions from his demand for autonomy which provides for one or two big Sudeten-German areas. The checkerboard autonomy of the type proposed by the Czechs will not suffice.

Something in the manner of an "appeal to reason" is directed tonight by the German press to the United States and France.

To the United States the Hamburger Fremdenblatt has this to say: "It is impossible for Germany to have on its frontier a small state containing 3,500,000 Germans, which have anti-German alliances. Under the Monroe Doctrine the United States would be opposed, of course, to similar alliances concluded by one of their neighbors with a non-American power. Thus, Washington should be able to understand the German kind of Monroe Doctrine which must regard it as a threat to the interests of the Reich if her neighbor maintains an anti-German policy of alliances."

Propaganda Minister Goebbels' Der Angriff addressed itself to the French Republic:

"France is the closest political and military ally of Czechoslovakia. It can encourage Czech obstinacy. It can also urge the Prague government to manifest a real sense of understanding toward the Sudeten-German demands, thus making negotiations possible."

The first edition of tomorrow morning's Voelkischer Beobachter will devote only one short communique on its front page to the Czech-German news. The Lokal Anziger and the Berliner Tageblatt will once again point out that Prague's government should exercise its authority in Sudeten incidents if it desires to show its good will. These comments are made over new alleged border incidents of a minor character.

France Fights Strikes.

Paris, Sept. 2 (AP).—The French government desperately fought today against a strike movement which threatened to engulf France at a moment when the international crisis over Czechoslovakia already was severely taxing statesmen in their efforts to preserve peace.

Labor ministry arbitrators, using every means at their disposal, tried to settle the labor conflict, involving nearly 500,000 workers who threatened to strike.

They reduced the number of strikers in textile plants at Amiens from 14,000 to 2,500 during the day, but tonight the workers walked out again.

Strikers demonstrated in streets of both towns, carrying banners demanding that Premier Daladier "respect the social laws or resign."

Leftist workers and members of the Paris region unions numbering 20,000 demonstrated their opposition to Daladier's plan for scrapping the 40-hour week in national defense industries.

Building trades and northern textile industry workers numbering several hundred thousand stood hard on their threat to go out unless they got satisfaction on pay and collective contract demands.

Tydings Attacks 'Invasion' As Lewis Taunts 'Old Deal'

clared, "protects property rights against high finance and protects human beings in their most sacred of all rights—the right to earn a living." Lewis reiterated the assertion he made Thursday in Chevy Chase that "future school children will think of Franklin D. Roosevelt as the greatest conservator of our generation."

Confining himself almost entirely to the issue of Federal intervention in a State election, Tydings warned his listeners that a victory for Representative Lewis in the primary balloting September 12 would establish "a highly dangerous precedent."

"This is the first time on record the Chief Executive has personally entered a Democratic primary," Tydings said. "Suppose it works? Who knows who the next President will be! With tremendous centralization of power in Washington, backed by a huge army of Federal employes, the day would come when a man could not run for office without the President's support."

Tydings mentioned the President by name only once, and then to call him "a great man." His statement was:

"Later on in this campaign you will hear me quote the words of a great man, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, when in 1930 he spoke against Federal interference with State elections."

Invades Lewis Section.

Senator Tydings opened his whirlwind speaking schedule with an appearance at the Sixth Ward Democratic Club, in East Baltimore territory commonly conceded to Lewis.

An audience of 500 heard him charge that "hundreds of Federal employes have been threatened with loss of their jobs if they follow their convictions and vote for me." He demanded to know whether Lewis "can call himself a Democrat while asking an outsider to come into Maryland with the force of money and intimidation to dictate to the Free State."

He reiterated his warning that, in the present perilous international situation, "this State must not be represented by a rubber stamp Senator who would vote for war at a word from the Administration."

Wins Stormy Applause.

Later in the evening in the residential section of northwest Baltimore, a Tydings stronghold, the Senator energetically defended his voting record.

His listeners in the Washington Casino accorded the dapper Senator stormy applause as he declared he "would vote all over again" against the reorganization bill and the President's court plan, although he conceded the need for greater efficiency in the Government and reform of the judiciary.

"I would have voted for a constitutional amendment limiting the age of justices and offered to do so at the time," he recalled, "but I did not feel our courts should be turned over to the Executive."

Apparently alluding to President Roosevelt's coming speeches in Maryland, Tydings expressed confidence that "if our emotions aren't inflamed too high and if Maryland retains that common sense for which it is famous, the State will register an overwhelming vote for our traditional form of government." He added a prediction that Senator George would be victorious in Georgia.

Notables to Help Dedicate New Purcellville Library

Purcellville, Va., Sept. 2. — The new Purcellville Library and Community Center will be dedicated Monday at 4 p. m. with appropriate exercises that include on the program speakers of note. Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, of Bluemont and Washington, will preside.

The guest speakers will include former Ambassador William E. Dodd, of Round Hill, and Dr. Sidney Hall, State superintendent of public instruction. Among those on the musical program are Billy Masselos, pianist, and Greely Stahl, violinist, of the Juillard School of Music, and the Washington child prodigy, Gertrude Troutman.

The library, a handsome stone structure, was financed by a 45 per cent PWA grant of $11,340 and a 55 per cent subscription raised locally. The library site was given by Mrs. Laura Cornwell in memory of her husband, the late Jacob Cornwell, and by the daughters of the late Mr. and Mrs. Nichols Hampton in memory of their father and mother.

The dedication on Labor Day marks the formal completion of the building and also the first anniversary of the opening of the doors, although at that time there was much construction that remained unfinished. The surroundings have been done through later contributions and the planting will be completed in the fall by a landscape artist. A memory garden is one of the beautiful sights of the grounds. Early this summer the Purcellville Garden Club planted a handsome boxwood in memory of the late Mrs. John T. Hirst, a charter member of the club.

A bronze memorial tablet containing 49 names of those who have contributed to the growth and development of the neighborhood in which they have lived will be in place for the dedication Monday.

The structure contains a library and reading room, assembly hall, council chamber, mayors office, kitchen and boiler room. Construction is of native stone, with a tile roof. The landscape includes a graded terrace, with flagstone walks, surrounded by a native stone wall.

Roosevelt Sets Liberals Above Partisan Lines

Politics

significance nationally, was taken to mean that the President desires to cut through all half-hearted positions pro or con the New Deal, and that he will insist more than ever that those whom he has named the "yes, but" men, must declare themselves in the future.

It came in direct line with not only his "yes, but" pronouncement, but the recent fighting speech by WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins at Boston, in which Hopkins defended the President's "right and duty" to intervene in primary elections.

Yesterday's statement stemmed apparently in part from the President's anger at newspaper stories from Michigan, asserting that his non-appearance at bridge dedication ceremonies at Port Huron, Mich., resulted from the belief that Gov. Frank Murphy, New Deal proponent, will be soundly defeated in the September 13 primary in that State.

The President reminded reporters that he was speaking in general terms when efforts at once were made to obtain specific references.

But it was not believed that he contemplated indorsement of liberal candidates in Republican primaries, since only a few weeks ago he scourged the "political immorality" of Republican voters crossing party lines to vote in Democratic primaries in an effort to defeat New Dealers.

But he indicated beyond a question that he would regard a liberal Republican opposing a conservative Democrat as conducting himself in the public interest, providing the Republican was a liberal at heart.

Chairman John D. Hamilton of the Republican National Committee immediately welcomed the statement, with the acid observation that it constituted a "repudiation of the New Deal and a large number of his followers on Capitol Hill."

Hamilton said: ". . . Today Mr. Roosevelt regards as a liberal anyone generous and liberal with other people's money.

"True liberals today, as always, are those who are making a determined fight against the centralization of governmental powers in one man.

"True liberals would never vote for irresponsible fiscal measures and for monetary tinkering which chiefly benefits a few speculators at the expense of the industrious farmer and worker. True liberals today are fighting against the domination of the labor movement by Government bureaucrats."

Calls Stories Distortion.

The Port Huron reference, creating a general stir among correspondents at the press conference, came when a newsman representing a Detroit newspaper, asked the President the reason for his decision not to attend the bridge dedication, as linked with Murphy's candidacy.

The President authorized this quotation:

"It is an absolutely unjustified assumption which is being made by Detroit papers that a failure to go to dedicate the International Bridge at Port Huron is in any way connected with the Michigan campaign. It is a deliberate distortion of the fact and the Detroit papers might as well get that."

With a somewhat grim smile he told the reporter he had asked for and had got it. Stephen T. Early, White House press secretary, vainly endeavored to have the President cut down the direct quotation, but Mr. Roosevelt only smiled as he refused.

The President then said he would help Murphy in the same manner he had other liberals.

White House aides represented the President as considering both Sheridan Downey, Democratic Senate nominee in California, and Culbert Olson, that State's gubernatorial Democratic nominee, as liberal in their viewpoints.

But this was coupled with renewed Presidential disapproval for the "$30-Every-Thursday" pension plan which carried Downey to victory over the Roosevelt-indorsed incumbent, Senator McAdoo. Aides said that the President looks on the pension scheme as a State matter, for decision in California by Californians, and believes in their right to try out the plan, if it does not violate the constitutional ban on State money coinage.

The President recalled that Viscount Bryce, famous historian, who wrote "The American Commonwealth," once told him that one of the prime advantages of the American form of government was that one or two States could always try out new schemes, sometimes considered of the crackpot variety, for a fair test of their workability. If they worked, they could be accepted nationally. The President cited the direct primary as an example of the spread of an innovation.

Senator Logan (Democrat), of Kentucky, said in comment on the President's remarks yesterday that he personally believed in holding party lines, adding:

"If the Democrats of the State choose a conservative, I would be for his election in preference to the Republicans' choice, since Democrats in the various States have the right to decide the type of man they want to elect to office."

He stressed his fear that a mixing up of Republicans and Democrats might result in a "bloc" system of government, such as prevails in most European parliaments. He concluded:

"A strong leader like President Roosevelt might be able to hold blocs together behind a program, but what is to happen after his service in the White House ends?"

country, through State agencies wherever possible. During his term as North Carolina labor commissioner, the State put in force a model child labor law, reduced hours of labor for women, and enacted an unemployment compensation law. Andrews said he made "a brilliant record for progressive and efficient administration."

Gorman, insisting on a 40-cent minimum for textile workers in the wage and hour division's first regulations, charged "employers are circulating the information that it has been agreed that 30 cents will be the minimum wage, based on the theory that this will bring more work to the South."

He declared a 30-cent minimum "will result in pauperizing the Southern workers and liquidating the textile workers of the East."

Cites "Equable Situation."

"A 40-cent minimum, with no geographical differentials and with the organized strength of the workers protecting wages above the minimum, would, on the other hand, create a more equable competitive situation in the industry, promote price stability and give textile workers in all parts of the industry an even chance to secure a living wage," his statement said.

Gorman left on a trip to New England where he said he will discuss wage-hour proposals with local labor leaders in the textile industry.

Andrews has indicated he may announce appointments to the textile industrial committee on next Wednesday. He has held preliminary conferences with textile leaders, and some minor problems on the scope of the industry remain to be worked out.

Coincident with the textile move, Andrews plans to organize two committees for another big Southern industry, tobacco, and will proceed thereafter to dress manufacturers.

See Court Test.

Andrews reiterated his view yesterday that the wage-hour law is constitutional, and said "even the most conservative lawyers" had told him so. But he thought a test will inevitably arise in the courts, and predicted it would be on the question of where interstate commerce begins. Nevertheless, Andrews declared that a court decision that one industry was not in interstate commerce would not nullify the whole law.

Announcing his appointment of Fletcher as his assistant, Andrews expressed "delight" that the North Carolinian accepted, and paid tribute to his "close, practical knowledge of industrial conditions and problems confronting employers and wage earners."

"He thoroughly understands and realizes the results of industrial instability and wage earners' insecurity," Andrews said.

"As commissioner of labor in North Carolina, he spoke out against the illusory promises made by gypsy plants seeking to exploit local communities for short times, then moving on. He is thoroughly in sympathy with the aims and methods of the fair labor standards act and is well known to labor commissioners throughout the United States for his progressive and practical views and experience."

Fletcher had been North Carolina labor commissioner since 1933, and has been active in the National labor conference inaugurated by the Secretary of Labor in 1932, and now serves on a conference committee to draft a model bill for "State wage and hour law."

Andrews said the rest of his staff will not be recruited at once, but "done gradually to permit careful selection."

Labor Act Need In U. S. Laid to Denial of Rights

By the Associated Press.

Atlantic City, N. J. Sept. 2.—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said today the Wagner labor act never would have been necessary if American industrialists had been as willing as British employers to recognize the rights of workers.

Commenting on the report of President Roosevelt's commission to study employer-employe relations in England, the A. F. of L. chief said in a statement:

"The report ought to serve to make many American industrialists review their own labor policy. It is apparent from the report that a fair measure of industrial peace rules in Britain because organized employers and organized workers are actually working in partnership on a business-like basis.

Blames Employers.

"If American employers wish to duplicate the record of relative peace in industry there, they need only to follow the inevitable conclusions drawn from the report and deal honestly and directly with the organized workers in the American Federation of Labor."

"If American employers," he continued, "were as willing to recognize the rights of workers as British employers have been . . . the machinery of the national labor relations act would have been unnecessary because the rights embodied in that act have long been recognized by British employers and voluntarily accorded the organized workers."

Green said the commission report demonstrated that "trade unionism is not a matter of restrictive law but of mutual confidence . . . built up by a long experience of collective bargaining."

$1,000,000 to Fight C. I. O.

Green was represented on the Presidential commission by Robert J. Watt.

Green's statement was issued as the A. F. L. executive council finished two weeks of jurisdictional hearings and drafted an annual report for the convention at Houston October 3.

The report, which will not be made public until the convention opens, covers the social, political, economic and organizing activities of the federation, with recommendations for future programs.

Green said the federation had spent $1,000,000 in its organizing campaign in the last year, much of which went into rivalry with the C. I. O. for supremacy in the labor movement.

Permitless Driver Is Jailed Again

Charles P. Buchanan, colored, 34, 1302 Riggs place northeast, was in jail yesterday starting a 60-day sentence for driving without a permit, just 24 hours after he finished a 40-day sentence for the same offense. Buchanan pleaded guilty to the charge, his third offense, before Judge Walter Casey in Traffic Court. Released from Occoquan Thursday morning, he was arrested in the afternoon at Fourth and N streets northwest when he struck a parked car.

Md. Convict Flees From Road Gang

Howard C. Parker, 36, of Bethesda, Md., on the first day of a three-month sentence for unauthorized use of an automobile, slipped away from the Montgomery County road gang on the Clarksburg to Lewisdale road some time yesterday, fleeing, authorities believe, into a heavily wooded section.

Foreman of the gang was Genoa King, of Damascus, Md., who drove the men to their work in a bus. The prisoner wore glasses, light trousers, a shirt and no coat.

Housewife Loses $46 In Sleight-of-Hand

Mrs. Margaret Anselmo, 724 Sixth street northwest, isn't so sure today that it's more blessed to give. A woman appeared at her door yesterday, sold her some flowers and then offered to bless Mrs. Anselmo's money. Mrs. Anselmo handed the woman $46.

The latter blessed the money and then apparently put it in a slipper. When she had gone, Mrs. Anselmo looked in the slipper—but it contained nothing but paper. Police are looking for the sleight-of-hand artiste.

Justice Cuts Sentence Of Purse Snatcher

A sentence given by another justice of the District Court was reduced yesterday when Justice F. Dickinson Letts, while denying a writ of habeas corpus for the release of Albert S. Tamorria, of Southeast Washington, decreased his sentence from 1 to 5 years to 1 to 3 years.

The youth, charged with robbery, is said to have taken the pocketbook of Anne Silverberg, 3465 Fourteenth street northwest, while she was walking along the street.

TVA Land Man Admits Urging Kin to Purchase Site Near Dam

Surmises Proof Must Have Been Stolen From His Files; Confesses He Didn't Value Public Service Standards.

By the Associated Press.

Knoxville, Tenn., Sept. 2.—Representative Jenkins (Republican), of Ohio, today elicited from John I. Snyder, TVA land acquisition director, that in 1934 he advised his father-in-law to purchase a tract of land near a site later proposed for a TVA dam and at the same time offered his brother-in-law a position with the authority.

The information was included in a letter Jenkins produced before the congressional committee investigating the authority, which Snyder said he wrote to his father-in-law, John E. Connelly, of New York City. He said he believed the latter "must have been stolen" from his files.

Snyder, a big outspoken lawyer, said "my position at that time was to have been very much criticized—I had no conception of public office," but he denied "anything pot perfectly legitimate was even considered."

He also said he "intended to discuss the matter" with the TVA board of directors before any action was taken, adding "a few days later I realized it was a fool proposition" and telegraphed Connelly to "forget it."

Snyder said he became acquainted with the tract while acquiring rights for the TVA to obtain slate from a quarry located on it. At that time he was a member of the authority legal staff. He said the land was about to be sold to satisfy the claims of creditors.

The letter suggested the brother-in-law could manage the land when not occupied with TVA duties.

Snyder said the "personnel division was not organized then as it is now." Gordon Clapp, TVA personnel director, had previously testified no jobs were given out because of "relations with the authority." Snyder said, however, he never attempted to secure the job for "Al."

Meanwhile, the committee prepared to pack up and go home today, after seven weeks of hearings.

Knoxville Deal Closed.

New York, Sept. 2 (AP).—Mayor W. W. Mynatt of Knoxville, Tenn., announced today acquisition of properties of the Tennessee Public Service Co. by the City of Knoxville at a cost of $5,433,500, for which the city authorized a bond issue of $6,000,000.

Mayor Mynatt, accompanied to New York by Warren W. Kennerly, city attorney of Knoxville, closed the deal shortly before noon.

"Operation of the utilities plant by the City of Knoxville," the mayor said, "will result in an annual saving to residents of my city of about $1,035,000. Electricity rates should be reduced by from 20 to 50 per cent."

Refusing To Budge.

The chief surprise in Mexico's reply to the second American note on expropriation is the means of delivery chosen by President Cardenas, in making it part of a speech to the Mexican Congress. In substance he merely reiterated the argument that the "common welfare must prevail over individual rights" and that, if and when indemnities become possible, Mexico alone will decide the valuations and terms of payment.

To make his position the more unmistakable, the Mexican executive rejected the suggestion that Mexico demonstrate its good faith in the controversy by refraining from further expropriation orders while also earmarking revenues in anticipation of reparation. This attitude, however, is to be construed as an admission of weakness rather than as an affront to the United States.

His government's formal note, to be published Monday, assuredly will not say this. Instead, it will probably be filled with legalistic embroidery for the position already declared. It seems evident that the arguments and precedents to be cited will be as inappropriate and misleading as Cardenas' "et tu" reference to the Roosevelt Administration's confiscatory devaluation of the dollar. For all signs point to the fact that Cardenas is caught between two uncomfortable fires, and knows not where to turn.

By instinct inclined to honor his country's obligations, he is effectively restrained by considerations of domestic politics. More than organized labor is here involved; indeed, growing splits in Toledano's ranks indicate that the unions' influence is on the wane. What is directing Cardenas' decision is the long and bitter history of Mexico's agrarian struggle.

For many years that unhappy nation has been fighting to revise and replace a medieval system of land tenure. But until Cardenas the populace lacked a leader who would and could restore to them the properties they believe endowed by nature for every man's use. Now that they have found him, they will not permit any such abstractions as international law to interfere with their victory, however hollow time may prove it to be.

The conception of communal ownership is difficult for northern minds to appreciate. Even if grasped, it would be virtually impossible for the American Government to tolerate its implications. This country has vast private investments in Latin America. To permit Mexico to confiscate foreign properties without any obligation for compensation would be to encourage similar tactics throughout the Southern Hemisphere, most of which is seeking to get something for nothing as desperately as is the Cardenas government. Instead of a "good neighbor" Uncle Sam would become a simple sucker.

Keep On Investigating.

Coroner Charles H. Hersch of Philadelphia has gathered enough evidence to indicate that the steaming of inmates in Holmesburg Penitentiary, like so many crabs in a kettle, was no isolated instance of torture, but part of a settled policy and practice. At the inquest which closed yesterday a sergeant of the prison guard admitted that he was the one who gave the order to have the steam admitted to the building on that hot August night. He insisted, however, that he was merely obeying a standing order and that he had dutifully reported his obedience to the deputy warden.

Quite a stickler for discipline, this sergeant, for later he testified that when he entered the building and found the radiators cold he complained about it to another guard who promptly remedied the situation. The guard captain testified that he had orders to apply the "heat treatment" whenever any prisoners were admitted to the isolation cells. The same officer, after admitting a certain uneasiness about the prisoners in the block, said that another general order prevented him from finding out before breakfast time next morning whether the men had survived it.

The hand-picked coroner's jury has been sufficiently impressed by such testimony to hold both the warden and deputy warden, as well as 12 members of the prison guard, for the grand jury on the mild-enough charge of "criminal negligence." But if the State of Pennsylvania has any concern for the kind of name it will have in what is left of the civilized world, it will by no means allow the matter to be closed with a coroner's inquest and a baker's dozen of arrests.

It seems clear that tortures as cruel as anything conceived in the Middle Ages still prevail in at least one Philadelphia prison. But what of other Pennsylvania prisons? Already at the other Philadelphia County prison, Moyamensing, State motor policemen, investigating on the Governor's orders, have uncovered queer objects—for instance, iron rings on which convicts could be spread-eagled.

In dragging some of the truth about the Holmesburg atrocities into the light, Coroner Hersch has done an excellent job. But this is the kind of thing that should be investigated from top to bottom. Gov. Earle has promised "drastic action." Let us hope the words prove something more than political rhetoric.

In The Melting Pot.

It has for some time been apparent that American politics are in the melting pot. The trend was first drawn to public attention when a group of self-styled "Jeffersonian Democrats" broke with their party two years ago to urge the election of Gov. Landon. It has been increasingly emphasized during this summer's primary campaigns, which are in many cases attracting unprecedented public interest for such contests.

And rightly so, since in several States, and in none more clearly than adjacent Maryland, the fundamental issue is the future philosophy of the Democratic Party. What is being fought out is whether that party should move en masse to the left with the President, or whether it should cling to certain of its fundamental traditions even if they do not fit into the category of what Mr. Roosevelt considers "liberal." It takes no academic training in political science to realize that this is an important matter.

Many factors contribute to the cleavage which is now obvious. It was foreshadowed by the practical annihilation which the last elections brought to the Republicans as an effective parliamentary opposition. Representative government never functions well unless the forces of the government and those of the opposition are fairly well balanced in the deliberative assembly. When there is a huge top-heavy majority, such as the Democrats now possess, the tendency is always for it to split, assuming that the minority is not powerful enough to force the party in power to close its ranks. During the last Congress the Supreme Court crisis brought this tendency to the surface.

Historically some political leaders have sought to meet such a situation by compromising the differences which divide the factions in their parties. Others have made the decision to ally actively with the wing which they prefer and to use their power to discipline the malcontents. There is nothing new in the "purge" technique and while Mr. Roosevelt considers the word extremely immature it has a long tradition behind it.

If it had not already been clear that Mr. Roosevelt has abandoned the policy of placating factions in his party, he would have demonstrated the fact by his remarks at the White House press conference yesterday. The Rubicon is crossed with the remark that "if there is a good liberal running on the Republican ticket, I will not have the slightest objection to his election." Henceforth the split in the Democratic Party, and a realignment of the Republican position to conform with that development, may be expected to proceed more rapidly.

Mr. Roosevelt's statement that "the good of the country rises above party" is a cliche. Every decent citizen feels that way, knowing that political parties are purely artificial instruments created solely for the purpose of making representative government possible. Since the mere existence of more than one party implies that different people have different ideas of what "the good of the country" is, this observation by the President has vital meaning only if it is given one special interpretation.

This is the interpretation that Mr. Roosevelt knows more about "the good of the country" than his critics, which may or may not be the case. None can blame him, anyway, for thinking that this is true. And as long as the machinery of democratic government remains intact no harm is done by having elected officials think they have the secret as to what is the country's good. If their formula fails to work they can be ousted at the polls.

It is very interesting, however, that the President should choose this moment to indicate that he plans to reconstitute the Democratic Party along "liberal" lines. The word is extremely immature, in the sense that what is liberal to one is most illiberal to another, but the meaning is clear. It means reconstitution along the lines which suit the President's temperament.

The announcement that this is to be done coincides with a failure of the elimination technique in recent primaries, and with much evidence that the failure may seem more pronounced when the returns from Maryland and Georgia come in. The indication is that if the Democrats refuse to "liberalize" their party the President will go out more strongly for the support of Republicans—and others—who admire his leadership. In Europe this technique has been called the formation of a "Popular Front"—a more accurate phrase than "liberal" since "popular fronts" usually reach so far to the left as to include Communists.

All this is important, the more so as it comes as the natural development of a trend long in evidence, and partly forced by those Republicans who are today showing much more interest in the Democratic primaries than was normal before the G. O. P. got hardening of the arteries. It is not less important because it is not surprising.

There comes a time when he who runs may read. The significance of the President's remarks yesterday is very obvious, though all their implications are as yet by no means clear.

A New Atlantic Squadron.

At any other time the formation of what the Navy Department describes as a "temporary Atlantic squadron" would probably have been dismissed as of little more than routine importance.

The United States has two entirely separate and extended coastlines to defend. Yet because of the prolonged Far Eastern crisis, the great bulk of the fleet has of late years been kept in Pacific waters. To be on the safe side, therefore, the creation of a special service squadron in the Atlantic is clearly in order, even though it is of relatively modest proportions. It will consist of only 14 ships, none of more than cruiser size.

However, all of the seven fast cruisers and seven destroyers involved are new, thus emphasizing the progress of American naval rearmament during recent years. The flotilla seems admirably designed for rapid emergency action of any kind. And in view of disturbed conditions in Europe its mobilization in readiness "to visit such parts as are designated" must be regarded as a very reasonable precaution.

At Kingston, Ontario, some days ago President Roosevelt underlined the point that Canada lies within the orbit of the American defense system. The creation of a new Atlantic squadron, to which additional ships could easily be added, fits aptly with this pronouncement of policy. By the same token this concentration of a flying squadron in Atlantic waters will strengthen the hand of those powers, such as Great Britain, now doing their utmost to achieve a peaceful settlement of the Czechoslovak crisis.

Capital Idea.

Always impatiently flipping through their calendars, sports writers are not content with discussing football but have now proceeded to hockey. What has stirred them up to non-seasonal comment is the recent disbanding of the Montreal Maroons. This leaves only seven teams in the National Hockey League.

In 1930 there were 10. After two years, the Pittsburgh club folded, having won only five out of some 40 games. The franchise was moved to Philadelphia but with no better luck. Next the Ottawa team gave up. Its franchise was shifted to St. Louis but again without success. And now the Maroons have gone.

It isn't the fault of the game—hockey is one of the most exciting sports to watch. Nor is it the fault of the public—Canadians in particular, would ski a mile to see a carom off the boards. The real trouble is that the hockey moguls have permitted all the stars in the game to congregate in one or two teams, notably in New York. As a result, there's little competition except when these teams play each other.

There are two reasons for bringing up the matter at this time and place. To begin with, talk of ice hockey is sound preautumnal strategy. In the second place, a solution for the game's difficulties may involve this city. It is urged that the concentration of stars be broken up and new teams organized in new cities. Among these, Washington is mentioned.

A capital idea! The city has taken fondly to professional baseball and football. Hockey during the winter months should draw as well. Of course hockey demands a rink. It is good news that the rink which is to be opened locally on or about November 1 will not only provide all-season sport for skaters but will also, we are told, be available for scholastic hockey matches.

For professional hockey, however, a larger rink is required. It may soon be forthcoming if the long-awaited development of indoor skating here meets the popular response which is predicted.

In recent months a number of circuses have folded their tents and silently stolen away to the bankruptcy courts, but in the midst of the current chaos and confusion has anybody missed them?

The Postoffice Department reports that 100,000 letters were mailed last year without addresses. All we know about it is that none of our creditors mailed any of those letters.

Hocus-Pocus-Wocus!

From the Brooklyn Daily Eagle.

The town of Rabbit Flat, Ore., we learn, has changed its name to Wocus. The residents thought Rabbit Flat too vulgar. Wocus, which is Indian for "water lily," gives the town the elegance it deserves, they decided. Personally, we would have kept Rabbit Flat. It seems a shame to give up our sturdy town names, many of them reminiscent of pioneer times, for mere elegance without meaning.

Last spring we commended the decision of Kennebunkport, Me., to retain that name rather than revert to the high-toned Arundel. We have no sympathy with the numerous Hog Wallows and Pumpkin Centers that have been dropping those fine old names in favor of hifalutin burgs and villes out of romantic novels.

There should be everywhere such pride in the old names as Massachusetts shows. Back in 1864 a former Lieutenant Governor, Henry W. Cushman, left a $10,000 fund, to go to any town in the State which would take his not unpleasing name. The fund now totals $35,000 and there is still no Cushman, Mass.

But perhaps Wocus is not so bad, after all. The time to get stirred up will be when Wocus decides to change its name to Waterlily.

The Holmesburg Horror.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Congratulations on your splendid editorials, "The Holmesburg Horror" and "Queer and Disturbing," appearing in recent numbers of The Post. One can well imagine living under the reign of Ivan the Terrible or some other human monster, on reading of the brutal, savage, cruel, inhuman treatment of the prisoners in the Holmesburg Penitentiary in the City of Philadelphia, the so-called cradle of liberty. The city is besmirched forever. While every citizen in the United States waits impatiently for the guilty parties to be brought to justice, the officials, like a lot of silly children, must quarrel and wrangle over who shall be arrested. Surely after having brought the eyes of the whole world on their city, the officials should drop their petty quarrels and act in some measure to redeem at least a part of the good name of their city.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With your kind permission I should like to extend to columnist, Mr. Westbrook Pegler, most hearty congratulations for his article entitled "Culture for Export" published in the August 24 issue of The Post.

The Dies Investigation.

To the Edittor of The Post—Sir: I have just heard the Hon. Martin L. Dies broadcasting the latest up-to-the-minute "findings" of his committee.

Before I do anything else I should like to ask the following question of Representative Dies: Just what specific definition does he apply to the words "Subversive" and "Un-American?"

For the first, my abridged Webster gives the following: "Tending to uproot; to ruin utterly; to pervert; corrupt." For the second: American—a person, custom, phrase or object, peculiar to America or the United States."

I wish the Hon. Mr. Dies would specify—"subversive" to what? and "un-American" in what respect?

Does the Hon. Mr. Dies forget that one of the traits most peculiar to the United States of America is the revolutionary day-to-day change in all things American? Does Mr. Dies forget that revolutions are fought for freedom and not for slavery?

In one respect Mr. Dies is a conventional, nineteenth century diehard, in that he seemingly believes that by applying the label "communist" to any individual or action, he has effectively stopped that action because of the carefully planned and nurtured stigma which has been continually tacked to the word communist.

Mr. Dies does not attack Communism or Fascism on a basis of whether they are fundamentally good or bad to the whole of the people, but on the basis of their danger to capitalism. One glaring proof of this is his apparent reluctance to give much publicity to Fascist organizations by name and the method by which he carefully guards names of individuals who are not openly or known Fascists, while he is only too eager to give the names of all "Front" organizations and anyone remotely connected with them.

The reason is very plain. Fascism is merely capitalism developed to the last degree and even in its present stage is of great aid in the strengthening of capitalist control, while communism is unequivocably for democracy and against capitalism.

Americanism still stands, Dies and his ilk to the contrary, not for capitalism but for life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness or peace, democracy and good health.

JOHN R. CARROLL.
Washington, Aug. 30.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have attended every hearing of the Dies committee that was held in Washington, and I know the heat was put on the committee, but without success. I am sure there will be an expose of a hidden super state or a government within our government that is attempting to dictate the destinies of our people.

I suggest that those who are so quick to find fault with the Dies committee inform themselves of the activities of the subversive organizations in this Nation who have for their goal the absolute destruction of the rights of a free people. I criticize the committee for attempting to smooth over the facts as presented at the hearings regarding Mrs. Roosevelt attending the Youth Congress. I can readily recognize that if this committee would confine itself to investigating the suspected so-called Nazi and Fascists organizations there would be no squawks from certain directions, but, as it happens, the Immigration Committee will come in for its share of blame for allowing these offsprings of revolution into our country. A protest that will reach to high heaven will result from any attempt to curb the investigation or to deny the committee the necessary finances to carry its investigations to a conclusion.

I am sure if the Dickstiens were conducting this investigation there would be less squawks from the Red elements.

Every true American organization should pull with this committee so that this situation can be cleaned up in this generation. It is not an overnight job.

DONALD SHEA.
Washington, Aug. 31.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The letter of "Karl Marx II" is an excellent example of the work of those smear artists so well described in his radio address of August 29 by the Hon. Martin Dies, chairman of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, and with which the famous Washington wisecrackers have already made us too familiar.

The current use of the name of Shirley Temple to smear and misrepresent the work of the Dies committee, a practice in vogue at present, is a most contemptible thing. This goes for all such purveyors of red herring, small or great. Such liberties taken with the name of another should be made a crime, with hanging for habitual offenders—shooting being too much the death of a gentleman, besides remotely suggesting military honors.

Mr. Marx knows, and from the tone of his letter I know that he knows, that the "pure and innocent," as he terms the child, are in especially high demand in the Red market for use as false fronts to help "put it over."

His references to cherry blossoms, tomatoes and red sunsets as suggesting Communist influence is an argument unworthy of a school child in a fourth grade debate. And as to red flags placed on dangerous excavations, the story went the rounds of the press that a certain representative of Moscow, seeing them on an open sewer on the White House lawn, thought they were placed there in honor of his visit.

AUTHNILE HIATT.
Bunker Hill, W. Va., Aug. 31.

A Passenger's Complaint.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a part-time rider in automobiles and a regular rider in street cars and buses, I should like to make an earnest appeal to drivers of automobiles for greater consideration of the occupants of public service vehicles.

It has been my observation that the drivers of public vehicles avert countless accidents by alertness to bad driving. It would mean too much to a motorman personally, to his company, and to the many passengers, for him to take any risk whatever. Depending upon this, a lone motorist frequently cuts in front of a bus or street car entirely against traffic rules. The result: He goes triumphantly on his solitary way, and, as has often been the case at corners, a car is left stalled with many tired people standing, until another car comes along.

In the case of buses, these necessarily violent stops shock passengers, and if they are not thrown to the floor, many are painfully wrenched in avoiding serious injury. It has happened in a number of cases I know of, though the injury was not serious enough to report.

Please stop and think, Mr. Driver; you will probably escape solely because the motorman will spare no effort to avoid collision, but what of the rest of us? J. T.
Washington, Aug. 31.

Unseasonable Football.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why should football, which is strictly an autumn and winter sport, be permitted to crowd the summer sports of baseball, tennis, swimming, polo, etc., almost off the sport pages of the newspapers in August? Is everything topsy-turvy the world over, or am I only old-fashioned? Anyway, I deplore the advent of football, rampant on the sport pages in August, while we are still clinging to the last vestige of summer; I even resent it seriously.

Why should professional football be played up day after day with so much tiresome detail? Does professional football pay for any advertising as compared with the tremendous amount of free advertising it is getting every day upon the sport pages? I cannot understand why the sports writers are, seemingly, turning themselves inside out to promote professional football.

I think football should await its turn and not crowd the summer sports out of their legitimate limelight. Let us have sports news, as well as other things, in their regular order. ENOCH A. CHASE.

Globe, Anchor—And Pen!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I submit this revised version of the well-known "Song of the Marines?"

From the Halls of Montezuma
To the shores of Tripoli:
We will fight our country's battles—
By writing endless letters
To The Post, Washington, D. C.

Hardly a day goes by that The Post does not publish a letter from a Marine or former Marine. Their letters comment on many subjects: War in China, war in Spain, communism, fascism, etc.

The civilian public has always associated the United States Marine with a rip-snorting, machine-gun-toting, revolution-busting fighting man. But what breed of sissy is this modern Marine Corps turning out? A gang of Shakespeares? Imagine Marines writing letters to the editor! If they don't like it here why don't they go back to Nicaragua and Haiti, where they came from? JOHN J. COGAVIN.

Apples.

WHEN SOLOMON wrote "comfort me with apples" into his auriferous song, he meant, I am convinced, exactly what he said. The glorious King was thinking fondly of this common fruit which is part and parcel of our lives. Biblical commentators bearing the sheaves of deep and scholarly research can never persuade me otherwise. Let these renowned gentlemen proclaim that Solomon found comfort not in apples, but apricots. But let them proclaim it to somebody else.

One likes to picture the majesty of the King laid aside while he holds in his royal hands a firm red apple, lifting it to sniff the enticing odor, turning it with fingers that are well acquainted with priceless rubies. Perhaps—I grant the commentators this—this apple did not grow in the palace orchards. Perhaps some soldier or some trusted emissary returning after long years in strange lands brought this strange and beautiful fruit to the King.

It might have been placed in his hands by the sinuous Sheba when she, so desirous to please, to enthrall, made this gracious, this feminine gesture offering the jaded senses of the monarch this solace.

What but an apple, firm of flesh and taut of rosy rind, could so have impressed him?

* * *

If I had been born amid orchards or spent my early years where apples were part of the landscape, perhaps I could take them in my stride. But my background was the contrasting beauty of vast orange groves that drowned us in floods of fragrance in the springtime and repaid us with the bounty of their gold in the winter.

It was the year I was 8 that my father's work took him away and I saw my first apples in the southern Appalachian Mountains. From the beginning I was delighted with the trees. They were in bloom and the texture of soft pink flowers and the frail fragrance were an amazement to one who had known only the waxy petals and heavy scent of the grovelands.

Then, too, apple trees grew in such fascinating shapes—some old and gnarled, others sprightly and gay, but most of them decorous and holding their canopies of silvery green leaves sedately. Best of all, they were fine for climbing, offering no thorny resistance, as did orange trees.

As summer came on and the fruit colored and ripened, I made the acquaintance of a brood of children that had heretofore been reserved and reticent; I had been too engrossed with the strangeness of my new surroundings before to notice the distance of their bearings. But gradually as our family became a fixture in their midst they accepted my sister and myself, and soon we were one of them.

That their forebears had followed Daniel Boone through Cumberland Gap, that their ancestry was undiluted Anglo-Saxon, that their speech held the quaintness of another time and age, that they were a bit of seventeenth century England preserved in these encompassing hills, I was to appreciate many years later. At the moment I was filled with joy by their presence and awed by the numerous and odd ways they had of entertaining themselves.

One day when returning from a long morning's ramble after stargrass—a pursuit that occupies whole families—we came home by way of an orchard. Apples were at their best and I was insatiable, ravenous, and all of us were glad of the respite of shade.

The orchard was large and untended, which I thought was an added charm. It was knee-deep in grasses and daisies and brightened by splotches of orange butterfly weed. Could anything be more perfect? Apparently something could. The eldest boy spoke, flinging away his apple with a contemptuous arm:

This met with the concerted approval of his brothers and sisters; only I demurred.

"Bury them! what for?—what's the matter with these?" I demanded. Squelched after being told that apples were only 'fitten to be et' after several days' burial deep underground, I made one last protest.

"But we'll have to wait! These are ready now!"

My wail was lost in the tempest that swept me off my feet as, gathering up hoes and sacks of stargrass, the mountain children swarmed by me.

* * *

It was a long hot climb to gran'fer's orchard which lay on the top of the mountain, but it was like stepping onto the last outpost of firmament to reach it. Aloof, companion to clouds and the four clean winds of heaven, it was a small Eden upheld on the palm of a colossal hand so that sun and rain might touch here first before descending to the trodden ways. These trees had space for background and open sky for covering.

"Empty the pokes," ordered the boy, and the star-grass was emptied on the ground. They set to work shaking down gran'fer's apples, filling the sacks and lugging them to the deep trench one of them had dug. Then they covered them, heaping the mountain earth over the bright red of these skyey apples.

This ritual, a commonplace to them, filled me with incomprehension and wonder; was their flavor enhanced by their stay underground? I never found out because I did not go back when some days later they were dug. I was content with apples as I found them, satisfying, delectable and unfailingly comforting. LAURIE HAVRON.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

'No News—Good News.'

THE HINES TRIAL, in my opinion, has been overplayed in the New York papers, but the sight of the story, still on top of the right-hand side of page one, is a blessed relief from day to day.

As long as the Hines trial leads the papers it is plain at a glance that it has not happened yet in Europe. On the day that Hitler makes his move Tom Dewey, Jimmy Hines, Dixie Davis and all the loathsome, crawling things which have been dredged up out of the politico-criminal sewers of New York to testify in court will be swept out of sight, and the proceedings will be summarized back among the manhood and goiter ads, as we used to say. Then the war heads will roar of confusion and terror, and the people will read the papers with a feeling that the hour of doom has struck.

• • • •

THERE WAS a hot trial going on in Paris in August, 1914, in which the wife of Joseph Caillaux, a former prime minister, was charged with killing Gaston Calmette, the editor of Figaro, for publishing intimate letters which had passed between her and Caillaux before their marriage. The whole world—the newspaper world, anyway—hung on that one, for, unlike the Hines thing, it had quality and a woman angle. But the war blasted it out of print, and I will bet you don't remember what the verdict was, if you remember ever hearing of the case at all. She was acquitted. I looked it up, names and all.

The question of news value generally is decided by the instinct of the desk in a newspaper office. Often the press is accused of overplaying or underplaying stories for reasons of business or political policy, and I am not naive enough to think you are naive enough to think this couldn't be so, ever. But often such a charge can be pared down to mean only that some pet beef over which the plaintiff has chewed a pencil far into the night, sandpapering his syntax and strutting his keen wit, has been boiled down to its relative importance, deep inside.

• • • •

WHEN I WAS a cub in St. Louis there was a folk tale, perhaps apocryphal (a word I never had the nerve to use before), about a man who had kicked one the night the battleship Maine was blown up in Havana harbor. This man was supposed to have been on the desk and to have tucked the bulletin away in a hole somewhere inside the paper. Whether he was loath to tear up page one when on the point of saying, "Take it away," or just, somehow, didn't appreciate the size of a dispatch no bigger than a man's hand I never heard tell. But they used to say that this man, now grown old, had quit the editorial side forthwith to become a recluse in the proofroom and that he was still reading proof because that job did not call for the exercise of decisive judgment on news values.

Another one, also perhaps apocryphal (that's twice), has it that the Chicago Evening Post, which was intellectual and cost a nickel, firmly shoved the Jeffries-Johnson fight in Reno back around page ten and reduced it to the essential intelligence that James J. Jeffries, white, the heavyweight champion, had been knocked out in the fifteenth round of a contest with Jack Johnson.

• • • •

BUT GENERALLY speaking, the news is played in proportion to its importance and public interest, according to the editor's judgment, which usually is fairly accurate. And, wishing Mr. Hines no particular ill, I hope he can continue to rank as high man in the New York papers indefinitely. Whether he did or didn't, and though his trial is a great bore in the reading, Mr. Hines is good news from day to day.

Maybe people do not realize what a strain they are under just now, all tense and apprehensive like a wounded American officer in the little field hospital of whom George Patullo used to tell. Mr. Patullo, the war correspondent for the Saturday Evening Post, was a patient when the Germans came over one night to bomb some forage piled close to the hospital. They didn't hit the hospital, but one plane kept circling over the roof until the wounded officer sat up in bed and shrieked, "Drop it, damn you! Drop it and quit buzzing around!"

What The Railroads Say

Surplus

"Is there any shortage of men willing to work for the railroads? Was there any such shortage before wages were advanced last year? Would there be any shortage after wages were reduced 15 per cent. Of course, the answer is entirely to the contrary. There are hundreds of thousands of experienced men now unemployed who would gladly go to work for the railroads at much smaller wages than are now being paid."

Shortage

"Is new capital coming in, or seeking to come in, to replace that which is constantly being worn out, and to provide the improvements needed to keep railroad service up to date to meet competition? Of course it is not. An occasional few millions here and there for badly needed rolling stock represents all the new money which is being currently invested in the railroads. And this slight new investment is being far more than offset by the railway facilities which are being abandoned and junked. The railroad plant is shrinking from the lack of new capital. As railroad plant shrinks, its job-giving power shrinks."

Ethics

Said George M. Harrison at the wage discussion in Chicago: "The records shows that $14,000,000,000 has been taken out of the railroad industry in 17 years, from 1920 to 1937, in interest and dividends, and it seems to us that the people who have so greatly profited from the industry should be the ones you should look to new to help you solve your financial problems." Note that word 'should.' Mr. Harrison is arguing his case purely on moral grounds—as if people with money to invest will put it where it is unsafe and will earn them next to nothing simply because he scolds them and tells them they ought to do so . . .

"No amount of exhortation would convince the employes that they 'ought' to work for less wages than they could receive in some other industry. Likewise, no amount of oratory about how much compensation railway capital has received in the past will convince it that it ought to go to work today for the railroads at 'wages' 84 per cent lower than it can get elsewhere. But without an inflow of new capital the railroads must perish—and with them will go the jobs that they otherwise would provide."

The passages quoted above are from an editorial in Railway Age.

The Labor Act

Interpretation Of President's Hope For Revision Of Wagner Act May Lie In Comment On British Trade Act Inquiry.

This is the fifth of five articles on the coming Congressional battle over amendments to the Wagner National Labor Relations Act.

By Richard L. Turner.
Associated Press Staff Writer.

MANY STUDENTS of Congressional politics believe that the American Federation of Labor holds a strategic, balance-of-power position in the coming conflict over amending the Wagner act.

The federation could seek, first of all, Administration approval for the changes it wants made—amendments restricting certain discretionary powers of the National Labor Relations Board as they affect the federation's craft unions.

If it should fail in that objective, it could then form, unwillingly, a temporary alliance with the conservative elements of Congress which espouse the amendments demanded by business interests—curbs on the board, plus restrictions upon the permissible activities of the labor unions. As one member of such an alliance it then would be in a position to keep the imposition of legal restrictions on the unions to a minimum or prevent them altogether.

Regardless of what it does, it will find the C. I. O. resisting changes to the act.

A. F. Of L. Strategy Seen Tied To President.

AT PRESENT the development of the federation's strategy is in its first phase. William Green, the president of the federation, has been consulting President Roosevelt on the desirability of amending the act. Obviously the answer to the question of what the federation's future course will be lies with Mr. Roosevelt. And for the time being, his attitude is an enigmatic factor of great importance in the developing controversy. So far the President has merely indicated that some clarifying amendments to the Wagner act might be in order.

Many are wondering if a hint of the President's attitude was not contained in his comment on the report of the commission he sent to Great Britain to study labor relations there. The report, in its essence, said that unions were well organized, readily recognized by the employers, that collective bargaining was widespread and conducted in good spirit, that reliable additional machinery for adjudicating employer-employe disputes was available, and that because of these factors, strikes were few and strike violence a rarity.

"Collective bargaining is an accepted fact and because of this the machinery which carries it out is functioning," the Chief Executive said.

Commission Omitted Recommendations For U. S.

LIKE THE attitude of the President, the effect of the commission's report on the controversy remains to be seen. The commission purposely refrained from making any recommendations for the application of British practice to American problems. But its conclusion that England had found the cure for its industrial ills in well organized unions, well organized employer associations and collective bargaining, was inescapable.

When he appointed the commission, Mr. Roosevelt said its study was not undertaken with revision of the Wagner act in mind, but for the purpose of clearing up certain erroneous impressions as to the operation of the British labor laws.

At the same time, some industrialists were referring to the provisions of the British trade disputes act of 1927, in conjunction with Britain's comparative lack of industrial strife, as pointing a lesson which America might well heed. The trades disputes act seemingly outlawed sympathy strikes and placed rigid restrictions on picketing.

But, the commission reported, this was not the case at all. It fact, it said that in 1934, 1935 and 1936 there were 39 sympathy strikes in England, and that it received no "concrete" evidence that the law had ever kept a union from engaging in a sympathy strike for fear of what might happen to it legally. The law, it added, had never been interpreted by any "court of record."

Trades Disputes Act Prevents General Strike.

THE COMMISSION said the act of 1927 was passed during the uneasy period after the general strike of 1926, and its primary object was the prevention of a repetition of that strike by "delegalizing" everything that was done in furtherance of it. For "ordinary industrial strikes," it added, the "immunity" of unions from lawsuits and prosecution for conspiracy was "preserved." The consensus in Britain was, it said, that the passage of the law had had no effect whatsoever on the progress of British industrial relations.

Recalling Mr. Roosevelt's statement about clearing up erroneous impressions of the British situation, some found of great interest the things which the commission reported not to be the case. The supposed outlawing of sympathy strikes was one, together with the commission's findings that British unions had no legal responsibility, that labor contracts were not enforceable by law and that the unions were not required to incorporate or register.

Tomato Paste Rule.

The Federal Trade Commission promulgated trade practice rules for the tomato paste manufacturing industry yesterday as a means of "more effectively stamping out unfair practices in the interest of the public."

Hull Gets Answer To Note to Mexico

Mexico's reply to Secretary Hull's last note on expropriation of agrarian lands reached the State Department yesterday. Hull said it was being translated, and, for the time being, withheld comment. The note will be published simultaneously in Mexico and Washington Monday morning.

President Cardenas' speech Thursday to the Mexican Congress indicated Mexico was again refusing inter-American arbitration, was agreeing to a two-man commission to determine the valuation of the expropriated properties, but was balking at Hull's suggestion that Mexico begin immediate monthly installment payments toward a fund for indemnifying American property owners.

D. C. Communists Oppose Sales Tax

Opposition to the sales tax proposal now being worked out by the joint committee on Internal Revenue Taxation was expressed yesterday by the Communist Party of the District, in a letter to Colin F. Stamm, counsel of the committee.

The party announced it is appealing to all organizations to oppose the sales tax, and said it would make its own proposals at forthcoming budget hearings.

"The proposed sales tax would constitute a compulsory wage cut for every employe in the District," asserted the letter, "whether Government or industry, and a cut in relief for every unemployed worker."

Fourteen Day War

How To Crush Czechoslovakia.

Following are excerpts from a plan for the invasion of Czechoslovakia by Col. Conrad, chief of staff of the Eighteenth German army corps. This plan was awarded a prize offered by the German Military Academy. The excerpts are reprinted from an English text, published in the September issue of Living Age. Note that no reference is made in this plan to the possibility of intervention by Great Britain.

AN ATTACK ON Czechoslovakia cannot be spoken of as a campaign in the ordinary sense. The outstanding feature of it is that the whole action must be concluded within 14 days at the most, and, if at all possible, in a shorter time. After 14 days there should be no Czech army left. The world must be confronted with a coup achieved at lightning speed (blitzartig); the troops which carry out the operation must be ready in the shortest time for eventual use in the west, in case France decides to help its ally and seeks to contest the decisions.

This line of thought takes on finality from the fact that Germany cannot wage a long war; the dearth of raw materials demands the quickest possible conclusion of a campaign.

• • • •

IT IS ASSUMED, on the one hand, that France and Russia are in military alliance with Czechoslovakia, that Poland is still allied to France, and Czechoslovakia is still a member of the Little Entente. On the other hand, the German-Polish agreements, as well as the attitude of Poland, rule out any help of Czechoslovakia from Warsaw. There might, indeed, be a Polish march into the district of Teschen. Hungary, too, will probably march into Slovakia. As a military factor, the "Little Entente" is negligible. Today Yugoslavia stands outside any combination against the Reich. Rumania is incapable of action.

No help could come from the Soviet Union, at least during the period of the great campaign against Prague. The Red Army could not, even if it wanted, be on Czechoslovakian soil in time to alter the fate of Prague. The way over the small roadless Carpatho-Russia is unsuitable for large troop movements, even if Rumania conceded the right of way, which is still doubtful. Troops from Vienna and Ratibor could easily and with small forces block the line of advance of the Red Army, because of these topographical difficulties and of the mountainous character of the country. Poland and Hungary would also be bound to meet such a Russian advance, which would be a threat to their most vital interests. An attack at sea, in the present condition of Russian fleet, would be hopeless; we could with ease repulse such an attack.

There is left the Soviet air arm. In material and quantity it is considerable, but Poland would in no case permit flight over her territory and so there remains only the way over Carpatho-Russia and over the Baltic Sea. We must and could meet these attacks, all the more as the Russians would have to fight so far from their base of operations. To these facts must be added unpleasant eventualities for Moscow from the Far East. The decisive fact, however, is that in consequence of Stalin methods, Russia for the time being is incapable to making war.

• • • •

THERE REMAINS France as the one and, indeed, very important factor. If she takes automatic action, with all the means at her disposal, a dangerous long war could ensue. But there are strong objections. France's mobilization requires so much time that in the interim the fate of Prague might be decided. It is doubtful whether the French people, faced with a completely mobilized and already victorious Germany, could be easily persuaded to embark upon a devastating war to help a Czechoslovakia whose fate is already sealed. It is more likely that France, unless threatened, would accept a fait accompli.

Thus the situation might be as follows: In the east, defensive air operations and fleet concentration would suffice to repel every Russian air attack. The understanding with Poland enables us to expose our eastern boundaries. Our available troops on the western frontier, along with our aircraft and fortifications, would suffice for defense against an advance of the French troops not yet fully mobilized.

We find ourselves in such a position that the troops which are to operate against Czechoslovakia do not need to be mobilized, for a large part of these troops always remain mobile. The mobilization of the remaining army could follow quietly, while the invading army is already marching on to Prague.

While in the past the East Prussian troops and the Landwehr formations would be concentrated for sentry duty at the Polish frontier, Army Division 1 would have the task of guarding the west and of defending itself against a possible French attack. In this it would be supported by Air Squadron West and the powerful western fortifications. They would have the task of defending themselves and holding up the enemy until Czechoslovakia has been finished. Only then could an offensive on our side be thought of. Punitive expeditions in the air could, however, be undertaken, as a reply to French air attacks. But here, too, a strictly defensive attitude is imperative to prevent a psychological change on the part of France, which is today averse to fighting; the same is true for England.

The Czechoslovak army is not a unity. It is unthinkable that the Sudeten German soldiers would fight against us. The same can be said about the Magyars. The Slovaks, too, would fight without much enthusiasm.

• • • •

THE CZECHS THEMSELVES are not a warrior nation. During the latter centuries they had no military tradition. It is quite possible that when they are threatened by betrayal among their own ranks and confronted by superior power and attack from all sides their morale and military efficiency would go to pieces. On the other hand, they have a really excellent armament for a small country; the Skoda Works must certainly be taken seriously. The leadership, too, has much improved in recent times. The will to fight exists in wide circles, but there is no doubt whatever that, as human material, the German infantry, for example, is far ahead of the Czechs.

The blow must be so powerful that the enemy has no time to pull himself together again. Hence the tank corps and, particularly, the motorcyclist gunners (Kraftschutzen) must bite into the enemy, never let go of him, and transform his retreat into flight and panic. In order to force the enemy to flee, the air arm, as in Spain, has the task of demoralizing him. Incessant and devastating air attacks on Prague, Brunn and other centers must break him to pieces and destroy the base communications. The so-called Czechoslovakian Maginot Line must, under all circumstances, be forced, and the enemy must be prevented, above all, from getting away even partially intact.

When and whether the operations shall take place is not a concern of the army leadership, but of the political leadership of the Reich, above all of the Fuehrer, upon whom the final decision, as well as full responsibility, rests. A criticism of politics under such circumstances seems meaningless. The one duty of the military authorities is to concentrate on the attainment of the objective. This is their sole duty.

Impression Of The Hines Trial.

Q.—What is your name?

Counsel—I object. It is incompetent, immaterial, irrelevant and has not been properly tied up.

Q.—Your honor, I have put Solly Glutz, better known as Razmattazah, on the witness stand, as you now observe, and I submit that it is all right to know his name.

Counsel—I must insist that the district attorney go about this in the right way.

Counsel—No, but we should follow correct procedure by asking Mr. Glutz where he resides first and working up to his name from that point.

Q.—Mr. Glutz, you need not tell us your name. Just state where you reside.

A.—I'm a whaler by trade.

Q.—I didn't ask you what your business was.

A.—I know, but I thought I'd beat 'em to the objection.

• • • •

Q.—Answer the question, where do you live?

Witness—I object to that.

Court (surprised)—You object to what?

Witness—To his statement I live in a tent.

• • • •

District Attorney—Just a minute.

Counsel—Object! The minute is not before us at this time.

District Attorney—If your honor pleases, I should like a minute to . . .

Counsel—As a member of the bar, you know very well that you must first identify the minute and state its purpose.

Court—I will overrule that objection. The witness may answer the question whether he saw Dutch Schultz during 1933, but not during 1931 or 1932.

District Attorney—No such question has been asked, your honor!

Court—Can I help it if all this bickering mixes me up? Proceed.

• • • •

Counsel—I object.

Court—On what ground?

Counsel—This is the first time I have heard about this window. I am entitled to know more about it. If he can open one window at this time he can open two windows. That opens the way for opening three or even four windows.

District Attorney—To save time I will withdraw the suggestion about the window and open a door.

Court (sternly)—What do you mean by giving us that information?

Witness—I was afraid if I didn't you'd all forget I was here.

Counsel—I move for the discharge of a juror and a mistrial.

Court—On white or rye?

It's a Dizzy Pace.

Press Conference Remarks.

IT WOULD be easy to over-interpret what Mr. Roosevelt said at his press conference Friday. It is likely to be over-interpreted. If that happens it will be a pity, for several reasons. Over-interpretation, over-emphasis on the unusual or striking, is unfortunate for the country. Besides, any over-emphasis on what Mr. Roosevelt said on this occasion would increase the sense of grievance which he already has about a portion of the press.

It was a case of alleged misinterpretation that caused Mr. Roosevelt to make the first of his striking statements. A newspaperman from Michigan asked if he had any plans about making a speech at the dedication of an international bridge at Port Huron, Mich. Mr. Roosevelt replied, quite matter-of-factly, that he had no definite plans. When a variation of the same question was asked, Mr. Roosevelt was apparently reminded of something which he had seen in some Detroit newspaper. I assume it must have been something to the effect that if Mr. Roosevelt did not go to Michigan, his staying away would be because he did not wish to identify himself with Gov. Murphy's campaign for re-election. Whatever it was that Mr. Roosevelt read in the Detroit paper, it obviously gave him offense.

About this, Mr. Roosevelt made an indignant statement of denial. Upon inquiry whether he could be quoted, Mr. Roosevelt said yes. He then had the stenographer read his statement slowly from his notes so that we could copy it down. It read: "It is an absolutely unjustified assumption that is being made by Detroit papers that failure to go to dedicate the international bridge at Port Huron is in any way connected with the Michigan campaign. It is a deliberate distortion of the facts."

That was the end of the quotation as the stenographer repeated it. Mr. Roosevelt then said he would add another sentence. The sentence was, "and the Detroit papers might as well get that."

• • • •

OUT OF THIS arose the other statement that is likely to arouse widespread comment. Someone asked the President if he plans to give any help to Gov. Murphy toward re-election. Mr. Roosevelt replied that he would feel the same toward Gov. Murphy as toward any other good liberal. That led to a perhaps "wisecracking" question whether Mr. Roosevelt would favor a good liberal if he were running on the Republican ticket. To this Mr. Roosevelt replied that he would. Subsequently this statement, like the other one, was read by the stenographer from his notes, and Mr. Roosevelt gave permission to quote it. The statement was: "If there was a good liberal running on the Republican ticket I would not have the slightest objection to his election." That was the end of the quotation as the stenographer had taken it down. But again Mr. Roosevelt added a sentence: "The good of the country rises above party."

The interpretation likely to be given to this incident is that Mr. Roosevelt wants to bring about a new party alignment, one party containing all whom he regards as liberal; the other, all whom he regards as conservative. The further interpretation likely to be made is that where conservative Democrats win nomination, Mr. Roosevelt in such cases would prefer the election of a Republican, provided the Republican candidate is what Mr. Roosevelt regards as liberal.

It is conceivable that Mr. Roosevelt may have something like this, or a part of this, in mind. But just how much, or what, he has in mind, ought not to be too seriously inferred from what he said on this occasion. For the one clear fact, about which there can be no misinterpretation, is that what Mr. Roosevelt said was wholly unpremeditated. It was wholly offhand, generated sponstaneously out of questions asked at the press conference and the atmosphere that arose in the conference.

• • • •

WITH THE word "unpremeditated" we come to a possible text for something useful that can be said about this incident. President Roosevelt's press conferences are a valuable institution. But Mr. Roosevelt would help himself and the country if he would make one rule for himself. He should not ever, at press conferences, let himself be carried by the accidental turn the questions take, into making unthought-out statements about important public matters. By adopting that rule Mr. Roosevelt would save the public from occasional disquiet, save the Democratic Party leaders from occasional cases of acute jitters, and perhaps save himself some regret. In the press conferences over a period of five and a half years now, Mr. Roosevelt has evolved a spirit of good-humored badinage, amusing give and take, wisecracks from both sides of the desk. It is amusing and attractive, but it is not the best atmosphere in which to make off-hand, unpremeditated statements about important public matters. If he chooses a press conference as the sounding board from which to launch an important public utterance, he would be wise to write it out carefully in advance.

If, at this particular press conference, Mr. Roosevelt was susceptible to irritation, if something before the press conference and outside it had put him in a mood subject to tension, that is a rare exception. At nineteen-twentieths of the press conferences the spirit is one of high good humor and raillery. Just now Mr. Roosevelt must have exceptionally much on his mind—Europe, Mexico, the farm situation. Besides, matters in the Democratic Party are not going in a way to please him.

Duce In A Pocket

By Barnet Nover

Why Mussolini Apes Hitler.

CONSISTENCY has never been one of Benito Mussolini's virtues. He was an ardent republican even as late as 1919, but when the situation made it expedient he became an equally ardent monarchist. He was loud in his praise of the seizure of factories by the workingmen in 1920, yet he rose to power by capitalizing the reaction against such practices. The author of "The Cardinal's Mistress," he became, in due course, the signer of the Lateran accord, which ended the old conflict between church and state in Italy. And now the Duce stands sponsor for a philosophy of racism and a policy of anti-Semitism which, in the past, he repeatedly denounced.

In this particular instance the about-face has been sudden and startling, producing in the rest of the world a reaction of mystified alarm. The number of Jews in Italy is not and has never been great. There has never been in the peninsula that background of virulent anti-Semitism which Hitler could draw on in Germany. And in no country is talk of racial purity so nonsensical on the face of it as in Italy, the blood of whose talented inhabitants is a composite of many races and peoples.

• • • •

HOW, THEN, explain the succession of measures, each more drastic than the last, which the Fascist government has lately been taking against the Jews of Italy?

With the German example in mind, some say this development arises out of a desire to turn the minds of the people away from increasing economic difficulties they now face, to make the Jews the scapegoat of disaster. Yet the Fascist press and Fascist spokesmen do not, in this particular as they do in many others, echo Dr. Goebbels and Julius Streicher and blame the Jews for Italy's misfortune. On the contrary, the anti-Semitic measures are justified as preventive rather than as punitive measures.

That also makes no sense. If, after 16 years of totalitarian rule in which every phase of national life has been regimented in accordance with the will of the dictator, the handful of Italian Jews really constituted a threat to the regime, then, clearly, the regime self-confessedly is on far less firm foundations than the Fascists insist is the case.

• • • •

WHAT, then, is the explanation? Perhaps the key is to be found in the fact that Fascist anti-Semitism, even in tentative form, did not begin to raise its head in Italy until after the formation of the Berlin-Rome axis. In that connection it is perhaps also significant that no anti-Semitic laws were put on Italy's statute books until this year, and particularly not until after Hitler's visit to Rome.

This visit followed the annexation of Austria by the Third Reich, the most serious diplomatic defeat suffered by Mussolini since he came into power. Had he been able to prevent it, as he did in 1934, it is likely that he would have done so, for Austria was a useful buffer. But Italy was helpless to prevent Anschluss. In Ethiopia and Spain the Duce had given hostages to fortune. Ethiopia and Spain continue to be liabilities of serious dimensions for the Italian kingdom.

• • • •

IN THE MEANTIME, in part because of the Ethiopian campaign and the intervention in Spain, in part because of the efforts made by Italy to achieve self-containment, an unrealizable ideal, even for countries far richer in resources, Italy's economic situation has gone from bad to worse. It is estimated that government expenditures now eat up half of the dwindling national income. At the same time, Italy is increasingly being crowded out of Central and Eastern Europe by its Nazi partner. That area of commercial expansion is now closed to her.

Thus Mussolini finds himself in a dangerous pocket. He can only get out of it by reversing his program which rests on the two pillars of empire and autarchy. To do so, however, may imperil his regime. Instead, he prefers to wait it out in the hope that before it is too late something may turn up.

• • • •

SUCH a course makes peremptory the continuation of the Berlin-Rome axis however much Mussolini may personally be suspicious of Hitler and worried by the expansion of the Third Reich. It is his only ace in the hole. And with the Anglo-Italian agreement going to pot because of the failure of Spanish developments to work out as anticipated at the time this pact was signed last April. Mussolini is under greater compulsion than ever to cling to the Berlin-Rome axis.

The Italian government's anti-Semitic policy, concurrent with the increasingly strained relations between Mussolini and the Vatican, where also the Duce is following Hitler's lead, are by way of a proclamation to the world that the dictators now see eye-to-eye on everything. At the same time, however, it is the price which Mussolini is being compelled to pay for Nazi friendship, whatever that may mean.

• • • •

MUSSOLINI has not abandoned his dream of empire. On the contrary, the very fact that Italy's position on the continent has deteriorated because of Anschluss probably makes expansion in the south Mediterranean all the more necessary in his eyes. That can only be achieved, however, at the expense of Great Britain and France.

It may be that the European situation will sooner or later compel these countries to buy the Duce's good will by permitting his star of empire to rise, even if it entails sacrifices for them. But they will do so only if Italy, linked with the Third Reich, remains a threat. And, should they be stubborn, German assistance in the development of an Italian empire may be the reward of an anti-British and anti-French policy by the Fascist regime.

It is a desperate gamble on Mussolini's part. But Italy's internal and external situations, which are at the bottom of it, are desperate, too.

The Federal Diary

The employe in the Superintendent of Documents Division, G. P. O., left his duties for a few fleeting moments to wash his hands. Upon his return to his desk, he was suspended—apparently for having neglected duty. The result: All, or nearly all, of his fellow workers have organized themselves into a U. F. W. A. Lodge. Of such are lodges raison d'etre.

And over in the Procurement Division, Treasury, are two gentlemen, recently demoted. The active Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians went to bat, and, after much crimson tape, that required a long time in the unreeling, the cases have been promised a hearing before the personnel committee of the department—possibly next week.

During the arranging of all this, a chief told the adjustment committee that it might, henceforth, post its notices on the bulletin board. The committee then framed a report regarding the two demoted men. But the chief said that such material could not possibly be of any interest to others than the two demoted men, and such material wasn't privileged for the bulletin board.

Then the committee started thinking, and concluded that the bulletin board could be used only for such "innocuous" manifestos as announcements of lawn parties and other things where a good time is being had by all.

Jim Preston comes in to say that the Archives has chosen for its current display some material on the idol of every school boy—Gen. Custer. There is on display all documents relating to the Battle of Little Big Horn.

Correspondence between Maj. Gen. Terry and Gen. Sherman disclosed President Grant's reasons for not wanting Custer to join the Army during this battle. However, Grant finally gave his consent, but with the restriction that Custer should "be prudent and not take along any newspapermen, who always work mischief . . ."

Thereupon Mr. Preston, arranger of the exhibit, was reminded that Gen. Sherman himself entertained even more explosive views on the subject of newspapermen who follow armies. Sherman was forever bedeviled by the notion that the newsmen were anticipating his movements and disclosing these, through their papers, to the enemy. And so he was thinking one morning when an aide ran to his tent, saying excitedly that a newspaperman had been killed by a shell. "Good," the general cried; "now we'll get our news from hell before breakfast!" That is the legend, at least.

We are of the belief that the inner wheels would try to do something toward bringing PWA people under civil service through the June 24 executive orders if the agency weren't so fluctuating. One month the number is sky high; a short while later it is tremendously reduced. We think that they think such a fluctuating situation would be difficult to bring under status. They pulled the law elastically in bringing the FDIC to civil service, and we have a notion they will use all the latitude possible in bringing others in. This is commendable. But we don't think there will be any bending backwards on behalf of groups, large or small, which are of uncertain tenure.

All Is A and B In Hollywood Caste System

Stars, Producers, Directors All Have Their Grades and Heed Them.

By Hubbard Keavy.

Hollywood, Sept. 3.—In the eyes of class-conscious Hollywood, the Franchot Tones' split-up was class A stuff, but the Weissmullers' divorce was class B.

There are two grades of everything in Hollywood.

It's an A and B town. Decidedly so.

There are A and B stars, stores and studios; romances, realities and recessions; directors, dames and deficits; prima donnas, plights and producers; caprices, cafes and clairvoyants; absurdities, achievements and addresses.

A actresses don't meet B actors socially, so they seldom have romances with them. Joan Crawford met Tone, a B actor, professionally. Tone has a class A social rating. When top people give parties, their guest list stays in the A groove.

B agents, peddling B stories, cannot get past A producers' secretaries; they have to sell assistants. A stars never appear in B stories—except by accident. (The producer blames the star; the star blames the director; the director blames the writer, and the writer loses his job.)

Even Freddie Bartholomew caught the class fever when he refused to take Jane Withers, a B actress whose pictures make A profits, to some gathering. He wanted to be Shirley Temple's escort, but Shirley snubbed him—maybe because he didn't quite reached the A classification yet.

B directors, with B budgets and B casts, always try to make A films. They seldom succeed. But Henry Koster did with "Three Smart Girls." The public saw it and Deanna Durbin became a star.

A players' divorces always make better reading than those of folks like the Weissmullers' or the Oakies' for instance.

Big stars can't afford to haggle, so they always pay the prices asked. Clark Gable knows he'll pay more for property than someone who isn't so famous. If he's smart, he'll send his secretary shopping. Even Class A telephone service costs more; the biggies insist on unlisted numbers.

Metropolitan

In the five years' time which has elapsed since Kong first intimidated movie audiences, there has arisen a clique of moviegoers which insist the story of the monster ape is a modern allegory. According to them, it encompasses hope, fear, frustration, in about the same proportions as those emotions are dealt out to the average man.

Whether this is a theory too precious for your consumption or even your indulgence, Kong is still good entertainment. Tarzan (by Morris or Weismuller) was never so funny beating his chest as is King Kong; possibly because Kong gives off a sound like a drum being thumped lustily.

The story of how a Frank Buckish movie-maker follows a map to a forgotten isle where Kong lives behind a tall wall is good stuff. Events leading up to the action proper are sometimes dull and talky, but once the swirling mists of the island enfold the ship, the actors move in a dream which might have come to any gluttonous child in any choice nightmare.

Fay Wray, heroine of the movie to be made; Bruce Cabot, first mate on the ship carrying her; Robert Armstrong, the man with the idea—they all pretend earnestly in their various demanding roles. Miss Wray was blonde then, and Cabot wore two-pocket shirts. Look how fame has defiled them. Tsk, tsk.

Good photography makes the shots of jungle treking fascinating, makes the prehistoric animals almost believable, makes Kong a monster to pity and fear. If this be an allegory, then you might feel a thrill of glee to see Kong's superb demolition of New York scenery, when once he gains the city.

Floyd Gibbons stages one of his tearing adventure stories, having mushrooms and murder as its thesis. It is better than usual because it has a lovely transparent false clew to throw you off the track. Or were you asleep all the time?

In the newsreel there is a fairly good clip on the Hines case, replete with witnesses dashing in and out of doors shielding their faces and acting like celebrities.

SALLY STROUD.

RKO-Keith's.

Abundantly wealthy in tootsie-tickling dance numbers, comedy of all shades from sophisticated to slapstick and plot that is considerably different from past Astaire-Rogers vehicles, "Carefree" is one of the reasons we should be glad that the talkies are here to stay.

This, the first picture in which Fred and Ginger have been teamed since "Shall We Dance" nearly a year and a half ago, is definitely among Hollywood's happiest products of this or any other year. Looking back over "Follow the Fleet," "The Gay Divorcee" and other films in the Astaire-Rogers-Berman-Sandrich cycle, the only one which, in this reviewer's estimation, surpasses "Carefree" is "Top Hat."

And I am not sure that the current hit would not be at the top if it boasted the lovely music Irving Berlin wrote for the 1933 masterpiece. "Carefree's" tunes fit neatly into the continuity and they are pleasant listening but when you leave the theater it will be with no "Cheek to Cheek" or "Isn't This a Lovely Day" escaping through puckered lips.

Ralph Bellamy, Luella Gear and Jack Carson are good in support of the principals but the choicest bits in gags and situations fall to Fred and Ginger, who squeeze every drop of juice out of them. Their swingiest dance is, of course, the "Yam" but, on the less violent side, they do a dream dance and, later, a trance dance which are sheer beauty.

"Carefree" is in its second week at Keith's and it should remain on Fifteenth street for at least another fortnight. If only for the accommodation of those of us who want to see it a second time, and a third.

"Good Scouts," the Donald Duck comedy, is being held over along with the Yam. G. G. G.

'Four's a Crowd' and Harris Are Earle Hits; Capitol Film and Vaudeville Make It Ditto

"FOUR'S A CROWD." Warner Bros. production of a screen play by Casey Robinson and Sig Herzig, based on story by Wallace Sullivan, starring Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Patric Knowles and Rosalind Russell, with Walter Connolly and Hugh Herbert. Directed by Michael Curtiz. Reviewed Friday afternoon.

By Gerald G. Gross,

Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

"Four's a Crowd" may be excused for taking that 33 1-3 per cent liberty with an ancient axiom because it is full of laughs and, after all, anything that can make us giggle, nay guffaw in times like these should be hailed.

There is no sense to be made of this batty film, but neither did the giraffe make any sense to the farmer seeing one for the first time. And the giraffe is a noble animal.

Then there is the matter of plot. "Four's a Crowd" is about a press agent who lies persistently to the girl he thinks he's in love with and who, scheming to make a philanthropist out of a choo choo loving tycoon, arranges to have——

So much for the plot which, though you will have completely forgotten about it inside 24 hours, provides an accommodating rack upon which some of the year's most hilarious gags and situations are hung. In the last analysis, what can be much funnier than a multimillionaire playing with miniature trains and a pack of Great Danes chasing a gentleman in bathing trunks?

That Precocious Dog.

Slapstick, as you may have gathered, is something that the Earle film is amply provided with. Its comedy reaches a body-shaking peak in the double elopement scene, in which Hugh Herbert contributes his brief but oh so potent bit.

I can't truthfully say that Errol Flynn is among my favorite stars but in this he is tops as the journalist-public relations counselor. Rosalind Russell, appearing in her first Warner picture; Olivia de Havilland and Patric Knowles—they round out the "big four" for the marquee—are correspondingly good.

When all is said and done, however, perhaps the brightest lights are Walter Connolly, as the train-loving Croesus, and that wire-haired terrier in the—ahem—bedroom scene. Though for comedy in its densest concentration, the palm probably belongs to Hugh H.

Phil Harris on Stage.

The vaudeville bill is on the same high level as the picture. It is good to have Phil Harris and his orchestra back after a three-year absence, not only because they are a group of front ranking entertainers but becaue they wisely choose to be restrained and smooth instead of raucous and spasmodic.

What I mean to say is that Harris—and the same goes for all the acts he introduces—is a member of that small minority of show people who realize that a song may be put over, a joke told, a dance danced or any other kind of routine executed successfully without extravagant gestures and lots of gingerbread.

The Harris music is uninhibited, but it is not obtrusive. His vocalist, Ruth Robin, offers several numbers that win applause even though she sings only with her voice. Peppino and Camille are a likable dance team, and for novelty you will enjoy Wences, a continental chap who does strange things with his left hand, mysterious boxes, pie pans, etc.

The screen feature is supplemented by a Bob Edgren sports short and a Paramount news.

Columbia

What the crowd roars must be approval, for here the picture of that name goes blithely on adding to the two and a half weeks already spent on F street.

Publicized widely for its deglamourizing of Robert Taylor and for the harsh and probably true things it has to say about the fight racket, the picture is doing excellent business throughout the country (Variety says so), not for those reasons, but because it is exciting, fast moving, exhilarating and entertaining, played credibly and with enthusiasm by its star and his supporters.

The story, as you must know by now, is that of a young Irisher, who somehow finds himself in the ring game, labeled "Killer McCoy," and tied up with gamblers and racketeers. He doesn't like it, but it is all he knows, and so he sticks until—

There is a great deal of fighting, but we thought not too much, and there is good character drawing and quite a few significant and memorable little moments. No punches are pulled in presenting a very unlovely picture of boxing and its hangers-on.

We liked Taylor very much and he seems to enjoy his job here. We are not boxing experts—always closing our eyes and backing away when leather comes near us—but in our humble opinion, he punches a bag with considerable vigor and excellent timing and his ring sequences are completely convincing, with a fine quality of edge-of-the-chair-sitting about them. (Maybe that last one, when he comes back so fresh after seven awful shellacking rounds, doesn't exactly belong in the "completely convincing" category, but it's very satisfactory.)

Support worth having is provided by William Green as the fighter-friend; Edward Arnold in another of his jovial-sinister big-shot portraits; Lionel Stander as a very amusing trainer with a blackboard-scrape in his voice; Maureen O'Sullivan, who need only look pretty; her delightful little Southern friend; Gene Reynold as a fine younger McCoy, and Nat Pendleton, a gentleman on the preferred sucker list.

Frank Morgan only annoyed us, and we particularly disliked the oversentimental, movie-ized, fake death scene allotted him. It sticks out badly because much of the rest of the picture is rather human and honest. The actor who has our sympathy as the holder of the "most thankless job" post is the guy sitting next to Clem McCarthy, with earphones on and twisting a little dial. Look for him, he's there at every fight and nary a word does he say nor expression does he change. Must be bad enough just to sit next to the McCarthy voice.

If you haven't seen the picture, do, for you'll probably like it. It has speed and tempo, a plot with several neat twists, and, as we mentioned before, excitement.

The subsidiaries include adventures of the serialized Dick Tracy, who weathers all storms, lives through all dangers just to keep the faith and be back with you and the kiddies in the next installment.

In essence, "Alexander's Ragtime Band" celebrates two strictly American epic-ettes.

One is the development of the dance music orchestra leader from small potatoes to some punkins. The other is the cycling of pop tuneage through ragtime, jazz, sweet 'n' hot, and swing. And cycling it is, indeed, since they are all fresh names for our old honey, hot rhythm.

Three of Hollywood's most expert smoothies, plus Broadway's top indigo canary, carry the story along at a spanking trot. We mean Tyrone Power, Don Ameche, Alice Faye and Ethel Merman. The result is a lush and handsome celluloid, studded with the prize old-time numbers and excellent new ones, too. It's a show that will play a beautiful tune on box office cash registers, too.

Happiest news of the picture is that Alice Faye is "in the groove" as the swingsters say. There's no doubt that the Faye is growing dramatically, singing more sweetly. She and Ginger Rogers seem to be taking the high road in the same way. She misses no chances in a part that gives her an opportunity to change gradually from a vulgar little spitfire of the Barbary Coast to a rather varnished Broadway star. Excellent, too, was her singing of "Alexander's Ragtime Band" in the 1910 manner, meaning that she "gave" straight with the richness and grace of a Nora Bayes. But equally colorful in a different way was her typical rendition of "Now It Can Be Told."

Don Ameche is the bull's-eye lad. He never misses. His current role adds another to his perfect score. As for Monsieur Tyrone Power, maybe it was our imagination, but it seemed that he had a tendency to walk through his part with a faintly lifted eyebrow.

Ethel Merman broils her musical numbers to a turn, is best in Berlin's new "Walking Stick," also she's getting along better with her acting. Jack Haley does nicely, too. But the best acting of the picture, except that of Alice Faye, is John Carradine's in the minor role of a cab driver.

"Alexander's Ragtime Band" is one of the "pictures of the year." There's no fault to be found with it except on the smaller technical points. Modern slang is miraculously transferred to pre-war days. Hair-dos and the apparel of both the men and girls are similarly misplaced.

'Dr. Syn' Starting At Open-Air Movie

Based on the unusual novel by Russell Thorndyke, which sold more than a million copies, the new George Arliss starring vehicle, "Dr. Syn," which opens tomorrow night at the Mount Vernon Open-Air Theater, presents the distinguished character actor with one of the most interesting roles in his career.

Mr. Arliss plays the title role, as the former pirate who turned parson, and who led his parishioners on their smuggling expeditions, preaching by day and evading the revenue men by night. Largely an action picture, the story can boast, too, of a love theme, carried by John Loder and 19-year-old Margarat Lockwood, who is a recent "find."

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Sept. 2.—Well girls, it's time to park your shorts and slacks and shine up the old shotgun, and be prepared for the fall season. Aim it at the first man or woman who insists you should slick your hair up like a rooster's tail if it's not becoming to you. Understand the new fad was brought about by hairdressers and permanent waverers who ganged up on you. Old pageboy bob was too easy—you didn't need a permanent. Could tuck up the ends in kid curlers, just comb it out and there you were, or were you?

HEDDA HOPPER

As for the new fashions, you can wear anything that's becoming and you'll be in style. Paris is trying to put over padded hips, leg o' mutton sleeves and bustles. But, just as Napoleon met his Waterloo, so will they. Women have gone beyond the stage of looking like a gargoyle because a designer tells them to. Corset makers who have starved to death are having a frightful time trying to put women back into old ironsides. We like comfort—it's good for us and we'll stick to it, thank you. If you look well in tailored clothes, wear 'em, barbaric or Oriental, stick to 'em.

The sanity we're using today comes from the screen, not Paris, because everyone wants to look like her favorite screen star. Pick your type and dress as near like her as your purse will allow. Shakespeare gave us that tip years ago. Still good.

Adrian tells me that the fall trend is looseness and broadness above the hips, which means big armholes. When a fact is good, keep it. Why give up broad shoulders when it shaves the hips to half size? You don't have to follow a half-baked idea like a lot of sheep. Variety is endless. Hats are big, little, in between, veiled or unveiled, leaving the face naked to the breeze. The doll baby variety lasted one month, thank heaven.

The other day at Irene's Salon, she gave a pageant of some of the loveliest combinations of color—much gayer than last year. She mixed an evening gown wine color with dusty pink, blue and belt of chartreuse. Tailored metallic evening suits, silver fox toque with pink bird, poised for flight, topped a draped black jersey dress. Lovely under fox coat, in case you've got one. Always the Patsy, I made the season's faux pas. Present was John Frederics who asked me to pick out the hats I liked and tell him about them later. I did, and to my horror, I picked three of Lily Dache's. He laughed and said: "I'll make you one combining all three. He did—it's a lulu.

A sports outfit with checks to satisfy even Bing Crosby, worn with a turban—looked like the ones we wore years ago. Do you remember, girls? Sure you do, you're not that old.

A blue full-skirted souffle evening gown with ostrich tips instead of flowers, but good only for flat chests. I'll have one when me ship keeps in.

Yes, girls, keep your eyes on Hollywood. We've certainly done it this year and I don't mean maybe.

'Three Loves Has Nancy,' Harriet Hoctor and Morrison Click.

"THREE LOVES HAS NANCY." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production starring Janet Gaynor, Robert Montgomery and Franchot Tone, with Reginald, Owen, Guy Kibbee and Claire Dodd. Directed by Richard Thorpe. Previewed Tuesday, August 30.

This delicious harbinger of Loew's highly vaunted fall-winter season begins with a laugh, there is a laugh in the final fadeout, and, in between, one's sides rarely get a rest. It's that sort of nonsense, is "Three Loves Has Nancy," and may your bridgework remain intact.

Janet Gaynor is a small-town girl, who has been left standing at the altar. Robert Montgomery is a jaded novelist to whose New York apartment Nancy goes when she arrives in the big city in quest of George, the cad who stood her up and whose identity won't be revealed here for reasons you'll find out about after you've seen the picture. Franchot Tone is Robert's publisher, a wise-cracking blade, who is brought down to earth by Nancy's home cooking.

Reginald Owen, Guy Kibbee, Charley Grapewin and Fay Holden are great in their comedy roles yet, with all due respect to their ability, the bulk of the farcical humor in "Three Loves Has Nancy" is dispensed by the trio who loom largest in the screen credits. For which credit is due not only to them but to the Spewacks, who fashioned the script, making of it an effervescent treat that should not be missed.

The Three Stars.

Franchot Tone looks older than he has ever looked before in pictures—maybe his domestic difficulties put those valises under his eyes—but that does not alter the fact that he turns in a dandy characterization of a wastrel who falls in love with his antithesis.

It may surprise even some of her ardent admirers that Miss Gaynor, who was starring in silents a decade and a half ago, can still play an ingenue role with such fire and manage to be very pretty, indeed, while doing it. Women may interpret that observation as a not so subtle dig but I do mean in all sincerity that she gives her director, her studio and her public a mighty good return for their indulgence.

Most film players don't care to become "typed" and Montgomery is said to be a member of that majority. Even so this M-G-M dependable, best known for his portrayals of flippant, conceited eggs, hardly need apologize for his production in "Three Loves Has Nancy." You'll just love to see him miss that train!

Flea Circus" Depicted.

Harriet Hoctor's terpsichorean skill and charm are too well known to call for comment here. Suffice it to say that her numbers maintain her high standard, the "flea circus" impression being as amusing as it is novel.

'Old Soak' Enters Its Last Week at Va. Barn Theater

Don Marquis' famed character, Clem Hawley, in "The Old Soak," played by Arch McDonald at the Cross Roads Theater, will open the second week of its run Monday.

The hayloft in the barn has been packed to capacity and S.R.O. hung on the door every night since the opening.

"The Old Soak" is the amusing story of a reprobate whose only interest is tipping the bottle until more important things turn up. When they do he steps in and saves the family bank roll and honor, all in one move. Arch gives a convincing characterization of Clem Hawley and is supported by a cast of regular barn players, including Don Sisler, Ruth May, Peggy Manesfield, Almyrio Doris, Theodore Field, Janice Norton, George Finger and James Spain.

Spain takes the place of Frank Bolton as the village bootlegger. He is no newcomer to the Cross Roads Players, having been in "Ninth Quest" this season and several productions last year.

Council Blocks Road Widening At Falls Church

The new town council of Falls Church again has delayed the project of widening Broad street from the Lee Highway west to the corporation line, rescinding action of the old council authorizing the State highway department to construct a 40-foot roadway at a cost of $70,000.

The matter had been pending before the old council, terms of half of whose members expired Wednesday night, since May and an effort had been made to limit the roadway to 36 feet through the town so as to save the old maple trees which line the thoroughfare. The State highway commission demanded "40 feet or nothing," which meant that about half of the trees would have to be removed.

Monday night at a recessed meeting the old council, with only three of its six members present, passed a resolution granting the 40-foot right-of-way, which aroused a storm of protests. Residents opposing widening were incensed that the council would take such action without a majority present, four members constituting a quorum.

Three new council members were sworn in Thursday night and immediately following organization of the council by appointing a town clerk-treasurer and a town sergeant, introduced the resolution recinding action of the old council. It was carried by a vote of 4 to 2. Final decision was promised within the next two weeks.

The three new members of the council are Paul W. Ferris, of the First Ward; Clarence Shotwell, of the Second Ward, and Brig. Gen. Ralph S. Keyser, U. S. M. C., retired, of the Third Ward. Other members of the council whose terms of office do not expire until next year are R. E. Ankers, J. G. Smith and Thomas F. Probey.

Capt. John M. Galt, 45, World War veteran, was named town clerk-treasurer to fill the post vacated by O. D. Calhoun, who was not a candidate for re-election. Alton P. Shumate was re-elected town sergeant.

Mayor L. P. Daniel announced appointment of the following committees, with the first named as chairman: Finance, Probey, Shotwell and Smith; roads, Keyser, Probey and Ferris; water and sanitation, Ankers, Ferris and Probey; law and public order, Ferris, Ankers and Shotwell; zoning and building, Shotwell, Smith and Keyser; street lights and shade trees, Smith, Keyser and Ankers; special school committee, Ferris, Ankers and Shotwell.

Members of the Fairfax County 4-H Club Council, meeting at Fairfax to plan the annual 4-H Club Achievement Day at Oakton School October 22, named committees to make final arrangements.

Chicago, Sept. 2 (U.P.).—Six private crop experts today reported severe heat and drought in the important western section of the corn belt had inflicted a 100,000,000-bushel loss on the prospective 1938 crop.

Today's average estimate placed the yield at 2,458,000,000 bushels against the Government's August forecast of 2,566,000,000 and their own prediction one month ago of 2,534,000,000.

Heavy crop deterioration was reported for Nebraska and South Dakota with material damage in Missouri, Kansas, and western Iowa.

Boy Leaving Aunt For Parents Held By Capital Police

A homesick 12-year-old boy left his aunt's home at Ardmore, Pa., yesterday, only to be picked up here en route to the residence of his parents at Ovieda, Fla.

The youngster, Camby Kimble, had been living with his aunt, Mrs. Cara Balderson, for the last year. He spent the summer saving nickels and dimes he earned by mowing lawns and selling papers. When picked up by police at bus station here, he had a pocketful of small change—$12 in all.

Camby, an eighth grader, weighing only 95 pounds, was lugging a 35-pound valise which contained all his possessions. The small size of the lad and the large size of the valise, made a bus station clerk suspicious, ending the adventure. The boy slept last night at the Receiving Home, as police sought his parents.

New Brunswick, N. J., Sept. 2 (A.P.).—One man was killed, another was injured and three trucks were destroyed today in a fire caused by a triple crash on Superhighway Route 25 in North Brunswick township near here. State troopers said the trucks and cargoes were worth over $100,000.

Isidore Bolen, 27, of Kernstown, Va., driver of a trailer-truck carrying a load of silk and rayon, was fatally injured. His helper, Power P. Statler, 30, of Winchester, Va., suffered first degree burns of the face, hands and neck.

The drivers of the other trucks, James Miskell, of Philadelphia, who said he was carrying a load of silk worth $70,000, and Linwood Powell, 25, colored, of Portsmouth, Va., transporting a load of watermelons, leaped to safety.

9 Arrested in Md. As Breakers of Dove Regulations

Failure to observe the intricate regulations of mourning-dove hunting got nine Maryland men in trouble the first day of the open season, the Biological Survey announced yesterday.

Sharp-eyed Federal and State game wardens discovered wheat scattered for bait in the Anne Arundel County field where the men were hunting Thursday. They also found four of the men had failed to plug their shotguns so as to limit each loading to three shells as required by Federal game laws.

The season, which opened Thursday, will close September 30 and reopen for six weeks November 15. Forty-seven illegally shot doves were presented to Walter Reed Hospital by the wardens.

Those apprehended were George W. Scible, George B. Woelfel, Stephen W. Duckett, Normad W. Shepherd, R. Thornton Strange and James G. Hunt, all of Annapolis; James V. Stockett and Kenneth R. Duckett, of Davidsonville, and Joshua F. Johnson, of Glen Burnie. Scible, Woelfel, Stockett and Stephen Duckett were alleged to have used unplugged shotguns as well as bait.

Rome Says Runciman Has Gas Mask Handy

Rome, Sept. 2 (U.P.).—The newspaper La Tribuna said today Viscount Runciman, British mediator in Czechoslovakia, is keeping a gas mask handy while seeking a solution of the minority crisis there.

Runciman, the newspaper said, recently received a package from London containing the latest model gas mask in use in England.

"Runciman, while dealing with the Czechs, is keeping gas masks at an arm's distance," La Tribuna reported. "Lethal fumes are arising from Prague. The solicitude of the London government for its noble fiduciary is truly an indication of the situation."

Md. Job Board Sets New High In Placements

2,246 Get Private Work in August; 5,971 Put on Projects.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Sept. 2.—By the narrow margin of three jobs, the State Employment Service established a new all-time record in employment placements during August, Director David L. B. Fringer reported today.

Fringer said a total of 2,246 jobs in private industry were found for unemployed persons last month, compared with the service's previous high record mark of 2,243 set in July. In addition 5,971 positions were located on public works projects.

Since January 1, Fringer said, the service has placed 12,716 persons and cut its active files from 124,000 on May 31 to 66,155 today.

The Baltimore city office of the service accounted for more than half of the August placements, Fringer added, listing a total of 1,235 and bringing its total so far this year to 6,718.

Profanity Enters Boston Broadcast —'Mike' Blamed

Boston, Sept. 2 (U.P.).—Profane language that startled staid New England radio listeners tonight was attributed to an "over-sensitive" "dead" microphone.

The profanity escaped from a studio in WBZ when an announcer, sorting a card file while awaiting to identify the station at 10 p. m. (E. S. T.), became exasperated at a mistake.

Apologizing to the listeners, John A. Holman, general manager of the station, explained that actually the microphone was "dead" but through some unexplainable phenomenon carried the words out over the air.

It came in the lull between the conclusion of the March of Time program and the chimes that precede the connecting of the "mike" for the station announcement and was so faint that it otherwise would never have been heard, Holman said.

Fire Hall Refused For C.I.O. Session

Winchester, Va., Sept. 2.—N. H. Eagle, representative of the United Rubber Workers of America, an affiliate of the C. I. O., ran into unexpected obstacles here today in the first open effort that has been made to organize industrial workers in Winchester.

Eagle contracted with the Sarah Zane Fire Company for use of the company hall, tomorrow night for a meeting of O'Sullivan Rubber Co. employes. Trustees of the building, upon learning of the purpose of meeting, refused to permit use of the company hall.

Spokesmen for the firemen stated they do not want their hall to be the scene of controversial meetings.

County Tax Exemption Of Distillers Attacked

Baltimore, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Harry O. Levin, chairman of the State Tax Commission, said today the commission had ruled an action by Baltimore County, exempting liquor distillers from tax assessments, as "discriminatory" and "of doubtful validity."

Failure to make tax assessments against county liquor interests between January 28, 1935, when the exemption was passed by the commissioners, and November 15, 1937, when it was rescinded, has become a political issue in Baltimore County.

Dorothy Thompson: As Harlan Miller Sees Her

Harlan Miller writes six days a week. He breaks precedent this week and gives you a sketch of Dorothy Thompson, the woman who waited seven years to interview Adolf Hitler, only to be expelled from Germany because she wrote ". . . he is the very prototype of the Little Man." Harlan Miller tells about Dorothy Thompson, not the columnist who is read by more than 5,000,000 families, but about the Dorothy Thompson who is Mrs. Sinclair Lewis in private life, and the mother of a 9-year-old son.

Slack Craze Has Reached The Limit

Says H. I. Phillips

Vacationists romping around in their slacks have just about shocked the natives in Miami, San Juan, and Puerto Rico. Already there are bans to prohibit women wearing slacks and shorts when they go shopping in these resort towns. H. I. Phillips looks at the situation very humorously and adds that in the rush hour, the tourists make the Miami Beach Postoffice look like a public bathhouse. For a sure laugh Sunday morning, look in Section VI.

Christian Science Topic to Be 'Man'

"Man" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist tomorrow. The Golden Text is from Psalms 84:4.12: "Blessed are they that dwell in thy house: they will be still praising thee . . . O Lord of hosts, blessed is the man that trusteth in thee."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Praise ye the Lord. Blessed is the man that feareth the Lord, that delighteth greatly in his commandments. Wealth and riches shall be in his house: and his righteousness endureth forever." (Psalms 112:1.3.)

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Let us rid ourselves of the belief that man is separated from God, and obey only the divine Principle, Life and Love. Here is the great point of departure for all true spiritual growth."

Baraca-Philathea Officers Plan Already for 1940 Golden Jubilee

HENRIETTA HERON.

Convening in New York City several days ago, officers and trustees of the world-wide Baraca-Philathea Union, a movement in which Bible classes of this area always have figured prominently, laid preliminary plans for the golden jubilee celebration in 1940.

Attending the conference were Miss Henrietta Heron, Washingtonian, for 30 years affiliated with the society, now general counselor, and Edwin Barrett, of Alexandria, treasurer. Both recentll trveled to Duluth, Minn., as delegates to the annual convention of the international organization, which, since 1931, has maintained headquarters here.

Representative body in this section is the Baraca-Philathea Tri-City Union, comprising 75 classes in Washington, Alexandria and Baltimore. Organized in 1931 at a meeting held at the Metropolitan Baptist Church, it has made Bible class building its business, carrying into action the slogan, "We Do Things!"

Among these classes who "do things" is the J. R. N. Curtin Memorial Baraca (Men's) Class of the First Baptist Church, Alexandria, a group instrumental in forming the Tricity Union. Barrett is a member of the Open-Door Baraca Class of that congregation.

"Mother" Philathea (Women's) Class of the District is the Centennial Baptist unit, which came into being in 1906. Some other active bodies are the Euzalian Philathea, formed 25 years ago at the Temple Baptist Church; Philathea, Eckington Presbyterian; Philathea, Metropolitan Baptist; Baraca-Philathea, Lincoln Road M. E.; Susanna-Philathea, Douglas Memorial M. E., and the Mooney-Baraca, Fifth Baptist Church.

"Young men and women at work for young men and women, all standing by the Bible, church and Bible school," is the platform of this interesting movement, embracing 2,000 classes in the United States, Canada and foreign countries, which held its world-wide convention in Washington in 1932.

On that occasion, a pageant—"The Man Who Wanted a Million"—was presented, dedicated to Founder Marshall A. Hudson, who lived to see his dream of a million converts to Christianity come true. When death stepped in 12 years ago, he had progressed toward his next million.

Hudson's plan—the club idea centered in a Bible class, launched October 20, 1890—is incorporated in a million-dollar combination church-hotel-club he built in Syracuse, 1940 convention site. This unique structure, birthplace of the first Baraca Class, will be utilized as headquarters.

Officers of the Tri-City Union, in addition to President Gaines, are Wilburn S. Jones, East Falls Church, and Miss Betty Ross, Washington, vice presidents; Verney Minnick, recording secretary; Brock Bruton, treasurer, and Mary Robinson, secretary, all of this city. C. L. Nash, of Alexandria, was first president of the group.

Young Pastor Has Youthful Parishioners

THE REV. JOHN KROMER.

Holy Comforter Minister Looks to Future With Congregation Only 35.

Youth at the helm sees a bright future for Brightwood's newest house of worship—the Holy Comforter Chapel at Seventh and Oglethrope streets northwest—where the Rev. John S. Kromer accepted a call June 1.

His progressive congregation, with an average age of only 35, has "great possibilities," according to the young cleric who, during West Point days, decided that his biggest opportunity lay in the ministry, to which he was ordained by Bishop Freeman on April 28 at St. Mary's Church, Aquasco, Md.

Consequently, upon graduation from the academy in '34, he took his commission as second lieutenant in the Officers' Reserve Corps, a rank he held while attending the General Theological Seminary, New York City.

Promotion of young people's activities is not exactly a new experience for the former cadet who, amid the roar of the "L" in Manhattan, conducted that work at historic St. George's Episcopal Church, where he served as curate's assistant while pursuing post-graduate studies at the seminary. He also assisted at St. Paul's, Great Neck, Long Island.

At St. George's, located in a once-fashionable part of the metropolis, the Rev. Mr. Kromer introduced and popularized badminton, a sport he still enjoys.

An accomplished equestrian, the Rev. Mr. Kromer, while his father, Maj. Gen. L. B. Kromer, U. S. A., was stationed in California from 1925 to 1928, caddied on a golf course to earn $165—the price of an Army "re-mount," horse, which he subsequently brought East.

"I was not quite clever enough to make the varsity polo team at the academy," he smilingly admitted last evening, relaxing on the tree-shaded porch of the Rock Creek Church parsonage, overlooking Rock Creek Cemetery. Intramural sports, especially wrestling, claimed his attention.

He likes to recall summers spent on a "dude" ranch in Montana; abroad, bicycling in France and England, and on the New England coast, where he witnessed the International Cup yachting races one season.

Fox-hunting, boating, opera and modern English novels are also numbered among the hobbies of this addition to local diocesan circles, who lived in the District from 1929 to 1934 while his father was on duty at the Army War College. He finished his high school career at Western, later matriculating at the West Point Preparatory School, 1918 M street northwest.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: While my husband has many lovable characteristics, and while I still love him dearly, I feel that we cannot go on as we have been going for the past four years. The problem is this: Being unable to provide me with furnishings for a home at the time we were married, he suggested that it might be better if I continued working "for a while." This I did, with the idea that we would save every possible cent in order to reach what I thought was our goal, viz., the accumulation of sufficient funds to furnish our own home, after which I would give up my job and stay at home to effect the economies that can be achieved by careful marketing and management.

• • • •

Now, after four years of working, we are still anchored in a furnished apartment, without one stick of furniture of our own, and without one penny of financial security in the form of savings. I attribute this (to me) awful state of affairs to my husband's incurable penchant for "entertaining" friends, acquaintances and, in many instances, even total strangers. In our home or out of it, he doesn't seem able to manage even one social contact without spending far beyond our means on refreshments . . .

• • • •

While one of my husband's more charming characteristics is just this sociability, it seems to me that he carries it too far for our own well-being, in dissipating our only means of advancement and security. Without being miserly or niggardly, I have many times tried to point out to him that people will respect us more if we give evidence of living within our means, on a sane and simple level. The proof of my contention is evident in the fact that these same people, who are on a financial par with ourselves, have never once attempted to duplicate our hospitality when entertaining us.

• • • •

The slightest excuse will cause my husband to dig into the already overworked budget for unlisted liquor, in addition to the amount already allocated to refreshments and entertaining, so that we are always penniless before the next pay check is due. I am sociable, too, and have been cordial to all and sundry who come to the house, but I can't see the wisdom of making what amounts to preposterous outlay of money on every social occasion. My husband spends large sums of our potential savings on extemporaneous junkets over week-ends—trips arranged without regard to my preferences concerning time, place or location. These haphazard trips, together with other extravagances, have resulted, in the past two years, in our never having a lump sum for a continuous week of summer or winter vacation.

• • • •

The situation has brought me to a state of miserable dejection, with the result that I have been given to frequent crying spells of late, which I can only attribute to an undercurrent of gnawing worry. In addition, my mental state has begun to interfere with my work, and try as I will, I am unable to control my disposition at home. I am becoming irritable and I know my husband feels that he is being abused. This astounds me further—until I realize that his inability to share my point of view on money matters, and his refusal to take seriously my arguments (though he listens amiably, promises to co-operate and then blithely continues as before), makes it impossible for him to grasp the cause of my despair. I still love my husband and would go to great lengths to be of help to him, but if this situation continues I shall have to leave him. Please advise me. Yours very truly,

DISTRESSED.

In Dealing With Wastrel.

DEAR DISTRESSED: The time has come, indeed, for a showdown of some sort, and it is up to you to take the initiative in precipitating it, before your nervous system collapses under the strain of financial worry and you are rendered unfit to cope with the situation. That you are near the breaking point in indicated by your chronic state of "miserable dejection" and your "frequent crying spells." Specific, constructive action is the best antidote for worry. It is also the most unmistakable declaration of one's conviction and intentions in a disputed matter.

• • • •

In my opinion, the thing to do here is to dispense with preachment, reproach and exhortation and have a business-like talk with your husband. Remind him of the incontrovertible fact that in marrying you, he took upon himself the obligation to support a wife and maintain a home of sorts. Remind him that your compliance to his suggestion that you "continue working for a while" was inspired by a supposedly mutual understanding and intention that your earnings were to constitute savings to be used in furnishing a really comfortable and attractive home, to be maintained thereafter on his earnings—which, if properly managed, would have been sufficient for the purpose.

• • • •

Show him that he has continuously abrogated this tacit agreement by wilfully and heedlessly squandering your joint earnings as if they were his alone to command; that he has, in short, not only failed to support his wife by his own efforts, thus defaulting in a binding contract, but, worse and moreover, has cruelly exploited that wife's individual earning capacity to the end of indulging personally extravagant tastes.

• • • •

Tell him that you were, in the beginning, willing and even eager to put your shoulder to the wheel at his side of the balky wagon, as it were; purely in order to get the machinery of your marriage running smoothly for the presumable benefit of both. But tell him that, as matters have developed, it would seem (figuratively speaking and to change metaphors) there here is one more case of a willing horse's being spurred to death. Tell him, this being the case, that there is no other solution of the problem than to restore his rightful burden to him and let him learn, by necessitous effort, how to carry it. Tell him the erstwhile inequitable assumption of responsibility is injuring his morale; wrecking your health and threatening to destroy the marriage.

• • • •

Tell him you are willing to make the concession of continuing to hold your job, providing he is willing to regard such earnings as savings, pure and simple, in all family reckonings of financial matters. Tell him it is your money, to do with as you wish, and that you sincerely wish to conserve it and spend it, as occasion demands, for the benefit of both; but that it is not to be regarded as either a contribution toward fixed or basic marriage expenditures, nor as an income available for spendthrift purposes.

• • • •

Give him to understand, in effect, that having taken unto himself a wife, it is his business to support that wife and provide her with a home; and that unless he is willing to discharge that responsibility, he must face the alternative of losing his wife. Tell him that, much as you love him, you would find it easier to live alone, on your own earnings, than to continue to worry yourself to the point of nervous collapse over his reckless and short-sighted mismanagement of family funds. Having thus declared yourself, proceed to suit your actions to your words.

• • • •

Revise your standard of living so that you can live within his income—moving, if necessary, to a more modest apartment in a less expensive neighborhood and stocking your pantry and "refreshment" shelves only with goods of such quantity and quality as his purse can afford. Put your own earnings in the bank under your own name, reserving enough in your pocket for purely personal expenses, such as clothes, transportation, luncheons, cosmetics and other items incidental and essential to your professional endeavor.

• • • •

If he refuses to fall in line with this program which you have foresightedly adopted as the only means of preserving the marriage and your own health, then I think you must give grave consideration to the idea of separation. However, I think it likely he will co-operate when he finds you mean business. I think his indiscriminate sociability and lavish hospitality are symtomatic of an immature and weakly amiable disposition; of a character that has no inner capacity for imposing discipline upon itself; and that he not only needs, but would respond, to discipline imposed by a stronger and more mature personality. For too long you have permitted him, who is entirely unqualified for the job, to be the pace-setter in the marriage. The relationship's only salvation depends upon your taking the lead, and holding to your own stride, hereafter. M. H.

For the Day She Goes On to Cocktails

ONE of the smartest, yet most practical styles of the season is the casual jacket, which provides just the right accent for so many different occasions. The one illustrated, of forest green velvet, with unusual leather lapels and cocky matching velvet beret, goes brightly to cocktails, worn over matching or contrasting velvet dress. Another day it may be combined with a tailored gown, or skirt and blouse, by the clever business girl with an eye for striking, though not obtrusive, office clothes.

By Ida Jean Kain.

LIFE DOESN'T do much to our faces until we are past 25. But from then on, the lines deepen year after year until the expression we use most is indelibly etched. Worry, anxiety and tension tug down on the muscles and leave the deepest marks . . . that's why they make us look older.

Every facial expression uses certain muscle groups, but the whole trouble is that we tend to use the same expressions instead of giving all the 60-odd muscles a little daily exercise. It has been estimated that talking—which we do most—brings into play about 14 muscles. Smiling uses four major muscles and affects 11 others, and frowning uses only two major muscles, but frowning is usually an expression of great intensity and it cuts deep lines in the face.

Facial Exercises.

Best for the face are the uplift movements of grinning, chewing, whistling and blowing, for they counteract the down-pull of both nervous tension and gravity. These movements are combined in facial gymnastics, and if you take them seriously and will do them every day they will keep your facial muscles so youthfully flexible that your face can't get set in its ways.

One of the simplest exercises is to blow up a toy balloon, one of the large ones. Let the cheeks puff out as the air is forced into the rubber, erasing all those set lines about the mouth and cheeks. Try it!

Louise Payne Benjamin, beauty authority, has suggested the exercise of tossing a feather into the air and keeping it afloat by blowing on it. The effort to keep the feather in the air will give you plenty of facial exercise.

The corners of the mouth are said to be an index to the disposition. At any rate, tension and determination compress the mouth into a thin, grim line, with parenthesis at the corners. You can let your mouth turn down at the corners, or up with laughter. To relax the muscles at the corners and keep the parentheses from becoming too deep, repeat the vowel sounds out loud . . . slowly, a-e-i-o-u. Move the lips freely in all directions. Whistling is good, too, because it makes you merry. And singing is excellent for the facial muscles. Run the scales and sing over the dishes instead of gritting your teeth.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay,

Modern Venus.

YOU didn't realize it until you saw yourself in that triple mirror. There it was—that ugly bulge in the back at the bottom of your girdle! That padding you'd swore you'd never let yourself get. Yes and—well there was a definite curve in front where your stomach used to be so flat. No wonder George had been making all those smart remarks about your "waddling along." You thought he had been kidding—but no, there they were, the shimmying hips, the spare tire above the waistline. It was terrible! Disgusting! That you who has always worn a size 14 should come to that!

• • • •

You decide to do something. And do it quick! You consult the magazines, the newspapers. There are exercises seemingly on every page. All right, you will get down to them.

You start in grimly. It is hard going. Your muscles are stiff. Your heart races. You puff and pant. The next day you are sore all over. But you keep at it, your mouth sternly set. This is really a test of character. You will just show George—everybody, that you have what it takes.

You go after your posture, walk high headed and snooty about the house. On the street you are so figure-conscious that you watch yourself in every plate glass window—bump into other pedestrians, turn your ankle on pebbles. Every woman you meet you study her hips, her waistline. Does she bulge worse or less than yourself?

The weather gets hotter, your muscles sorer, your eyes sleepier nights and mornings. After all, maybe you are overdoing it—at first. Maybe you really ought to see a doctor about your heart before you go on any further.

Another thing, perhaps you are making a mountain out of a molehill. After all, you stack up pretty good with other women. Take 90 per cent of those you meet—well, anyway, 75 per cent—your hips are as good as theirs. For that matter just let George—or anybody else—stand on the street for ten minutes and how many women will he see that have figures so much better than yours?

Why—why even take Venus herself. Her stomach's not perfectly flat. Or take any of those naked women in the art galleries—they've all got plenty of curves. Take Botticelli's women—look at their stomachs. Take most of the women you see at the beaches in bathing suits. Why it's perfectly natural for the stomach to have some kind of a roll in front. If it didn't, where would they put the organs?

• • • •

Another thing, if you don't have some flesh on you your face'll look like a hag. The women with the best complexions always are a little plump. And besides, if you reduce too much how will you look in evening dress with your shoulder blades sticking out?

Then take the Orientals—they're simply crazy about fat women. Of course, George isn't an Oriental . . . oh, well, though when you get right down to it, all men are alike.

• • • •

The main trouble with you is that you need a new foundation. It's that old girdle . . . yes and your old summer dresses that have shrunk with the cleaning. That was really what started George talking. You'll look entirely different when you get a new foundation . . . and one of those new fall draped dresses. You would really look very slender in something black . . . and draped . . . with the right lines. Yes, that is the whole trouble. What you really need is some new fall clothes.

Fashion News on Top In 1938 Fall Fabrics

New York (AP).—Fall fabrics for 1938 have their fashion news on top. Scores of them are marked by some kind of surface interest.

Many of the new coat wools, launched by one of the country's leading quality designers, have a "smooth-rough" boucle weave—a novel treatment of an old idea. Its effect is both luxurious and smart. Some of these fabrics are slightly reminiscent of Persian lamb, others of petit-point, while still others have a soft, thick, spongy weave.

A number of other designers have created costume and coat wools whose surfaces are marked by raised rib or diamond patterns giving them a personality of their own.

The wools for new frocks reflect a less striking surface interest. Many are soft and pliable, although a few are woven with a slight nub.

Child Handicaps Need Attention For School Days

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

I have discussed this week the preparation of the child who is first entering school, first, from the standpoint of protection against dangerous contagious diseases and, second, from the standpoint of effectiveness of vision.

But there are many other physical defects that should be considered.

The child at school is exposed to new responsibilities, and it should be ascertained that he comes to his competitive job, so far as possible, with a healthy and efficient body.

This, as Dr. Allen G. Ireland says, is decidedly the parents' job, and it is the most important way in which they can help the school to do better work. Learning means strain on every resource of the mind and body, and effectiveness is a matter of fitness; that is, physical and mental preparedness to do one's best. Teachers know how true that is. Too many of them are burdened with classes of unfit children.

The commonest handicaps, according to careful surveys, are decayed teeth, sore gums, adenoids, diseased tonsils, defective vision, impaired hearin and malnutrition. All of these can be remedied and the time to do it is before school opens. To wait until after school frequently means loss of time for the pupil and further postponement by the parent. Consult your physician and dentist now. Have these handicaps to good school work removed before your child gets off to a poor start in the new term.

The Parent-Teacher Association is engaged in many excellent projects for the welfare of children. But in my opinion they are making one contribution which stands out above all others. I refer to the school lunch—either the midsession milk luncheon or the organized hot luncheon at noon.

Never before has there been greater need for the Parent-Teacher Associations to plan good and adequate school luncheons. The economic conditions of recent years have deprived many households and their children of physical and emotional security. Food has been less plentiful and less wisely chosen. And in some cases, school boards have been compelled to withdraw financial support for the luncheons.

New Campus Wraps.

There are some smart new tricks in campus wraps. One is a short boxed coat of blue chinchilla with a peaked hood lined in the new Guard's red. Another is a water-shedding hooded gabardine cape with arm slits for bicycle riders.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Sept. 2.

ALREADY THE kindly hand of change is upon our pestilential summer city. If, as we oldsters say, winters ain't what they used to be, neither are summers. They are far worse. Something has happened to New York. North America is slipping toward the Equator, or that fanciful band has moved north, or the sun spots are at it again. Whatever it is, some malign fate has cursed us with intolerable weather, and whenever a local press agent again mentions this city as a great summer resort, I will punch him right square on the nose.

ALICE HUGHES.

By the same token, what the balm of early fall does to us, and for us, is really miraculous—and all the more exciting because of the unholy size, noise and pace of the town. August finds us at our lowest ebb, physically and spiritually. We are worn down below fighting weight, and we do not speak—we snarl, Heaven forgive us. Week-ends in the country are little help, for the return plunge into the inferno is incredibly painful. New York nerves, never sound and normal, are in tatters by mid-August. We are a miserable race.

And then, with the first of September, comes a note of hope, and even good cheer. The scowls relax, and if we can't yet really smile, we achieve a sort of neutrality, as though we didn't hate absolutely everything. The first cool breezes, the first faint tang of vitality in our heavy, lifeless air, finds the 7,000,000 slowly reviving, looking about, taking an interest in victuals and even things to do and wear. Today I know that next Wednesday night 22 handsome young knights in armor will gallop out on the sacred sod of the Polo Grounds and lash out in our first game of football. The very thought is a cooling, comforting draught! Will I be there? Bet your old silver fox! Fall will be official!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Marion Palmer, the hosiery stylist, told me a comical bus story—and this town reeks with such. Seems Marion was riding up the Avenue on a bus-top the other day, wearing one of the dolly hats on which two small blackbirds were perched. She nearly jumped out of her pumps when a small girl rushed up and yelled, "Did you know those two birds are eating your hat." When the girl child was satisfied that the birds were defunct, the bus quieted down once more . . .

• • • •

When, and if, you come to town, walk the block of West Forty-fourth street, between Fifth and Sixth avenues, some night about 11, just to experience the prize work of the local panhandlers' racket. The operators are not seedy Bowery bums, but young, slight men who look only faintly hungry. That block is lined with clubs—the Harvard, the City and the New York Yacht among them. The spouse and I were needled five times there one night this week, and we were fed up after shelling out two quarters. We referred the next three to their pals up the block. It is strictly an organized racket, with a boss getting a large slice of the nightly take.

Many to Stay In District For Holiday

Hulls and Ropers Among Group Remaining at Home.

Clubs Expected to Lure Throngs for Labor Day Week-End.

Owing to a shuddering horror of holiday traffic, a number of important and attractive people who might otherwise be expected to be comfortably ensconced at smart resorts over the Labor Day week-end are staying right here in Washington. And when society prefers to remain quietly in town over the last holiday of the summer rather than celebrate it elsewhere—that's news.

The Secretary of State, Cordell Hull, and Mrs. Hull have decided to stay in the Capital, and will remain in their apartment at the Carlton. The European political tangles haven't allowed the Secretary to get away for a real vacation all summer.

The Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper will likewise spend the holiday quietly at their home on Woodland drive. A succession of visiting relatives has at last ceased with the departure of the Ropers' two young grandchildren, the Misses Martha and Carolyn Coker, who left recently for their home in Hartsville, N. C.

Prochniks Also To Remain Here

Even in the days when the former Austrian Minister and Mme. Prochnik had a cottage at Rehoboth Beach, they always remained in Washington until after the Fourth of July and were careful to come home before Labor Day. For the first time in years they have spent almost the entire summer in Washington, but their dislike of traffic and crowded beaches will keep them here over the week-end.

The Prochniks, incidentally, are looking around for a new house, as they plan to leave their residence on Twenty-fourth street the first of next month.

Many of those who are remaining here over the week-end will go out to the Chevy Chase Club tonight for the regular Saturday evening dance, before which a number of people are entertaining at dinners. This will probably be the last evening this season that guests will be able to sit in chairs on the smooth floodlighted lawns and dance on the terrace off the drawing room.

Society Beginning To Return

Next week-end will see a good many people once more installed in their Washington homes. Mrs. E. W. Pavenstedt is already en route back to this country after a summer in Europe, when she visited Germany and Paris. She will land in New York next week. The engagement of her daughter, Miss Anne Child, to C. B. W. Dick, of Philadelphia, was recently announced and the wedding will take place in the fall.

Mrs. John Caswell will return shortly after Labor Day from a two weeks motor trip in New England. She visited Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, at Fairhaven, Mass., and stopped with Mr. Caswell's family in Boston for a few days.

Mrs. Hamilton Bryan and Mrs. John Magruder, who have been touring Europe in a station wagon with their children, will sail September 10 to return to Washington. They have been abroad since early summer.

On Sunday evening, at 6 o'clock, the closing banquet will be held. The first event of this type took place in 1928. At its conclusion, the kamp council will be installed.

Those serving on the banquet committee are Elizabeth Carter, Beckie Young, Mary Martha Finn, Ruth Materse, Joan Shumaker, Adele Stern, June Martyn, Gloria McClosky, Lucy McNeely, Alice and Frances Holmes, Marjorie Moffat, Anne Levitt, Irene White, Agnes Hamilton, Borwnye Middleton, Helen Miller, Juanita Thurber, Mary Sartwell, Jean Sartwell and Kitty Richardson.

Public Hearing On D.C. Budget Set Sept. 12-13

Public hearings on the District's 1940 budget estimates, totaling $66,365,282, will be held in the District Building board room September 12 and 13, beginning at 10 a. m., the Commissioners announced yesterday.

This sum represents an increase of $16,601,230 over the present appropriation to all municipal departments. At the same time the Commissioners sent to more than 100 civic and professional groups invitations to attend the public hearings.

Although the amount of funds requested is an increased over the amount appropriated this year, it is less than the budget estimates submitted last year. At that time $69,500,000 was placed before the Commissioners as the amount to run the District government. They pared it down to $50,000,000, and the Budget Bureau cut it still further to $47,000,000. Congress, however, appropriated $49,764,052, including the items carried in the deficiency bills.

The Commissioners refused to comment on how they will deal with the budget estimates, but it is expected they will keep the figure around the $50,000,000 mark.

The hearings will afford the new Engineer Commissioner, Lieut. Col. David McCoach, jr., an opportunity "to get right into things," Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen said yesterday.

McCoach will arrive Wedensday to succeed Col. Dan I. Sultan.

2 Narrowly Escape Death Here As Guns Are Accidentally Fired

Two .22-caliber bullets found their way accidentally to two human targets yesterday, doing little damage but causing considerable fright in both cases.

The victims were Frank Trine, 40-year-old newspaper vendor, no fixed address, and Frederick James Walker, jr., 18, of 15 Milmarson place northwest.

Trine suffered a wound in his left hip as he watched a woman trying in vain to hit a target at the shooting gallery in the 1300 block of E street northwest. The woman, Jean Scott Dinan, 28, of 1914 Seventeenth street northwest, turned to reload the target rifle after three unsuccessful attempts. The weapon discharged accidentally, according to police, and wounded Trine.

Miss Dinan accompanied him in a taxi to Emergency Hospital, where he was treated before being transferred to Gallinger. His condition is fair. The woman was released ni custody of her attorney pending the outcome of Trine's injury.

Walker unwittingly served as target for his own rifle and thereby narrowly escaped death. After practicing his aim in the woods along New Hampshire avenue, beyond the District Line, he sat down on a rock with the rifle beside him.

The barrel pointed toward him, the trigger was cocked, police said. When the gun discharged accidentally, the bullet which might have proved fatal merely grazed the side of the youth's head.

He was treated by Dr. Stewart M. Grayson, 5701 Kansas avenue northwest, and returned home.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Annie C. Walter, a son, Alpheus L. Walter, jr., of Arlington, and a daughter, Mrs. Harold Haynes, of Silver Spring.

Col. Jesse Warns On Assessment In Arlington

Col. Charles T. Jesse, Arlington County treasurer, issued a warning yesterday to property owners that the second installment of the sewer assessment becomes due October 1 and no additional notices will be sent out by his office.

The total assessment per front foot on sewer project No. 1 amounted to $736,912.28, and under the terms of the assessment property owners could pay all of their quota and receive a 5 per cent discount or they could pay in seven annual installments without discount. When the discount period closed 61.88 per cent of the total, amounting to $456,012.62, was still unpaid. Since that time $28,532.04 has been added by supplemental assessments, and in a short time another assessment amounting to $27,834 will be added and notices sent out. This will leave a total of $793,278.32 in assessments for lateral sewers unpaid by the property owners.

Col. Jesse said yesterday that he is required by law to file suits against all property owners who have not made any payments on their assessments and suits are now being prepared and will be filed in the near future. He declared he would not send any additional notices prior to filing suit, but any person not having his original notice could obtain the information at his office in the county courthouse.

70 Sunday, Samuel Gompers Prefers Flowers to Labor Talk

Samuel J. Gompers, chief clerk of the Labor Department, son of the founder of the A. F. of L., and a light carrier of his long years, left his office for the Labor Day week-end with an armful of flowers, a birthday anniversary to observe on Sunday and many thoughts on organized labor that his position won't let his publicily express.

Gompers found the flowers on his desk yesterday morning and surmised that he had been favored by fellow employes. He didn't know, exactly, what the flowers signalized and began turning conjectures this way:

The flowers may have been a compliment on his seventieth birthday, which occurs on Sunday; or on the recent extension of his services for one more year in the department (he was scheduled for retirement by reason of age; or sent, perhaps, because of the approach of Labor Day, associated so strongly with his father's activities.

In any event, the flowers were appropriate, he reasoned; and in a sort of aside remembered aloud how many years he had served the Federal Government.

"Fifty-two, in all," Gompers remembered. He went into the Government Printing Office in 1887, and from there to the Department of Commerce and Labor. When the department was split in 1913, sending the labor branch into its individual field, Gompers went with labor, and, during the years, became the department's chief clerk.

Upon the way labor is moving, the son of the A. F. of L.'s founder has many ideas, but he won't express any. Labor and politics, he explains, are so interwoven—and the Government has rigid rules against its employes talking politics too much.

Racket Check Signed 'Hines' Shown in Court

Hines

John Saxon, jr., of Orange, N. J., an Internal Revenue agent. Their testimony also corroborated the story of Davis that he sent $500 to Hines under just such circumstances.

The third link, offered by Mrs. Windruff, was testimony that she made payments of about $500 to Hines on four or five occasions, on the instructions of her brother. On one of these occasions, she said, she gave Hines a check for $500. She identified the check, produced by District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey. It had "J. Hines" written on the back of it as one of several indorsements. Dewey said the State did not contend Hines wrote that signature personally.

12 More to Testify.

Forty witnesses had testified for the prosecution when the trial was adjourned tonight. One of District Attorney Dewey's staff counted off on his fingers 12 more to come. Among those are "Big Harry" Schoenhaus, one of the major Schultz gangsters, and Milton Bernard, accountant, who prepared income tax returns for the mob. Mrs. the defense of any further cross-examination by Lloyd P. Stryker, chief counsel for the defense, is expected to be the first witness Tuesday.

A minor sensation in the trial this morning was the abandonment by the defense of any further cross-examination of "Dixie" Davis, with whom Stryker had wrestled to no appreciable gain on Thursday. The trim little lawyer was on the stand for just a moment. Excused both by Stryker and Dewey, he vanished from the courtroom not to reappear, it is believed, till the day of his sentence as confessed co-conspirator.

Steuer's testimony was the high spot of the day. Bald, sharp featured, shrewd of eye, he talked in a voice that a silenced courtroom had to strain to hear.

Friend of Hines.

Dewey, Stryker and Justice Pecora were all deferential. After testifying to how he told Hines he was no longer interested in the Fliegenheimer case, once he learned that Fliegenheimer was Schultz, he said Hines told him he too was not interested. He confessed to a great friendship for the defendant, lasting over "25 or 30 years."

When Dewey cut in that he had not heard before that Hines said he was "not interested," after Steuer turned down the case, Steuer was indulged by the court while he addressed a few brief remarks to the jury warning them that he did not mean to give the impression to anyone he remembered exact conversations."

"You have the most famous memory in the New York bar," objected the prosecutor.

"I don't belive there ever has been a competitive test in that matter," said Justice Pecora dryly.

Leaving the courtroom, Steuer was not forced to confront his old friend, the defendant, toward whom he scarcely looked. When seated in the audience during a recess, the veteran lawyer was admonished by a court attendant to remove his straw hat.

Cross-Examination Ends.

After Davis, dapper and nonchalant, took the witness chair, he was there just long enough to draw a paper cup of water to slake his throat, assauge his allegedly festered tonsils. To the astonishment of Dewey and everyone else in the courtroom, Stryker rose and told the court he had no more question's to put to the State's star witness.

The district attorney, with the expression of a man who has just seen a miracle, said he would refrain from re-direct examination. The witness had been on the stand for two full days—one telling his story; the other having it freely disputed by defense counsel. Davis seemed relieved to learn that he could not be questioned further. He left the stand with evident delight.

Wire Tappers Talk.

From that time on it seemed Dewey was attempting to clean up various odds and ends of his case by bringing on a succession of witnesses to corroborate testimony of his first-string witnesses. It took him all morning, however, to establish the authenticity of Federal Government agents in tapping Davis' telephone conversations in 1933.

William J. Mellin, special agent of the Internal Revenue Bureau, testified he tapped Davis' telephone wire on June 6, 1933. The agent told of following Davis' telephone wire from the disbarred attorney's apartment at 55 Central Park West to 41 Central Park West, on the corner of Sixty-fourth street, where he installed the tap and apparatus to record what numbers were dialed on the telephone. Then, he said, he turned the whole business over to detectives, who made sure it was really Davis' apartment.

Stryker opened his cross-examination by contending wire tapping was illegal in New York State, and asked the court to determine whether he was right. "Show me any police officer who has the right to break the law," he challenged, warning that wire tapping was a felony in the State.

The district attorney asserted that the State courts had previously held wire tapping not a crime. He asked the court to instruct the jury use of that method of crime detection was not illegal when applied by officers of the law in performance of their duty. The jury, he protested, was being prejudiced against "a decent Federal officer doing his duty."

Justice Pecora reminded defense counsel that the law read that where evidence had been illegally obtained it could be received in State courts when it was relevant.

John Saxon, internal revenue agent, of Orange, N. J., followed him to the stand. An investigator for the Treasury Department for 18 years, he told of meeting Davis and then sitting in on his telephone wire in September 28, 1933, at 9:14 a. m., when he heard a man named Harry tell Davis that "Jimmy" wanted $500 in denominations of $50 by noon, and "Holly" was coming down for it.

New City Manager Named in Norfolk; Shake-up Is Near

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 2 (AP).—With Mayor John A. Gurkin in office today by his own vote, and Col. Charles B. Borland elected to become city manager on September 16, local political circles were watching with interest in anticipation of further head-chopping at city hall under the Gurkin-Page-Roberts triumvirate.

Mayor Gurkin was elected on third ballot, when he voted for himself to break the tie. Councilmen Wood and Reed voted against him to the end.

Col. Boland has indicated that a number of changes in administration personnel at city hall may be expected when he takes office as city manager.

2 Are Fined $125 After Wild Ride

Fines totaling $125 were assessed against two non-resident men yesterday in Alexandria Police Court by Acting Judge Harry F. Kennedy.

Clyde R. Bishop, 22, was fined $25 for driving on a revoked permit, $50 for passing four red lights and $25 for reckless driving, evidence being introduced to show he was driving at 82 miles an hour. Harry O. Kilkerson, 21, was fined $25 on a charge of resisting arrest.

Officers O. W. Nixon and Robert Peacher testified they saw the men, riding tandem on a motorcycle, pass through a red light late Thursday night at Washington and Franklin streets. They said they gave chase and overtook the motorcycle at the south end of Highway Bridge.

Survey by AFL Finds Business On the Upturn

Business

3,038,908 on August 20, an increase of 22,133 over August 13, but WPA officials say rolls are reaching a peak, and may not reach the 3,200,000 predicted following its Southern expansion program.

The Association of American Railroads reported another increase in revenue freight loadings for the week ended August 27. The 620,511 cars loaded showed an increase of 22,593 cars or 3.8 per cent over the preceding week. But loadings still were 20.8 per cent below the corresponding week in 1937.

40,000 Rehired in Month.

Last Labor Department figures showed approximately 40,000 factory wage-earners returned to employment in July and weekly factory pay rolls increased by nearly $500,000. Showing a pick-up over June, public employment offices made 226,855 job placements in July, of which 156,042 were with private employers. Value of new residential buildings for which permits were issued in July was 79 per cent higher than in the preceding month and 129 per cent higher than in July, 1937.

The American Federation of Labor economists estimated that 23 per cent of all workers are still out of work, and placed their July estimate of unemployed at 11,344,000. But they said the July upturn in workers' buying power was due to increasing employment, as reflected in a $31,000,000 July increase in workers' income.

"The gain was due chiefly to increased pay rolls in factories, railroads and road building," said the A. F. of L. survey.

"This gain, due to recovering private industry, supplies more than seven times as much buying power as that provided by increasing WPA work, for WPA added only $5,000,000 to its pay rolls in July. In June WPA added $8,000,000, so that the buying power added by industry in one month almost triples that added by WPA in two months."

Quote Observers.

The labor economists said their analysis indicated "that thus far in this year's recovery spendings of private business for capital goods, such as plant and new machinery, are keeping pace with increased consumer and Government spending."

"This trend is in strong contrast to the recovery of 1933 to 1937, which was chiefly a consumer goods recovery until 1936," the survey said. "The quick start of improvement in capital goods industries is explained by some observers as due to several causes: Expansion programs postponed in 1937 are now being revived; firms with obsolete plants are now at a disadvantage."

The survey said some of the recent rise in employment is based on expectation of future needs and "must be supported by actual buying power if recovery is to continue this fall."

Dollar Rises.

London, Sept. 2 (AP).—Momentary abandonment of government control over the foreign exchange market today permitted the freed dollar to hit the highest level in three years.

Much heavy buying was by investors who feared adverse repercussions in world economics from the international political situation. Strength in the dollar arose from this and two other factors which were given free rein when control was lifted to these to permit "natural forces" to operate:

Aside from buying inspired by fears of political repercussions, an almost equally large volume was traced to normal needs which are particularly great at this time of the year for purchases from the United States, especially farm commodities.

There has been a conviction among London financial and business authorities that sterling should be cheapened in terms of the dollar to enliven lagging British export trade.

Last night one pound sterling sold for $4.85⅝, while during some periods today the pound was nearly 1 cent cheaper. It closed at $4.84⅛.

Bertillon Marks Help to Identify Crooks at Death

The 11,000 John and Mary Does who die unidentified throughout the country each year have a much better chance of being identified by time of burial if they have criminal records.

The sad fact emerges from a study completed recently by the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Nearly a quarter of a million persons are reported missing each year, it was found, but 15,000 never are located.

Thousands were unidentified at the time of their death. Of the 11,000 last year 2,603 remained unidentified at time of burial. In 1,129 instances the persons were identified by fingerprints on file at the F. B. I.

While there are more than 7,000,000 fingerprints on file there, only about 850,000 law-abiding citizens have registered their fingerprints.

GILT OFF THE DOME: Far from being a paradise for girls with a yen for a husband, Washington probably harbors more bachelor girls and spinsters per capita than any city in the world . . . Some of the Capital's preachers are concerned about this . . . The bureaucratic aristocracy begins at $5,000. A Government $5,000-a-year-man is equal to a $15,000-a-year-man in private life.

There's a rumor that every Government lawyer appointed must now have the O. K. of Tommy Corcoran, even if his Congressman swears that he's another Elihu Root or another Hugo Black . . . That would be quite a task itself for any ordinary man, as the Government puts quite a few lawyers on its pay rolls.

By election day in November, the President's loyal opposition will have built the "purge" of the Senate up to an issue almost as alarming as was the "packing" of the Supreme Court last year. But the "purge" is being conducted (by cooks with other things on their minds) in such an offhand manner that some of the errant Senators are being left on the hot gridiron until you can smell the burning flesh, while others are left underdone, but often waving the Roosevelt banner as if their hearts would break.

* * * *

To illustrate: Only three Senators have had the castor oil bottle thrust under their noses; yet there are 12 among the 29 Democratic Senators up for re-election this year whom the Kitchen Cabinet would have liked to purge; not to mention 11 of the 25 who come up in 1940.

PWA Rejects Grant for a New Armory

Oehmann Still Hopeful Congress Will Allot Building Funds.

A National Guard armory for the District practically passed out of the picture yesterday when the Commissioners were officially notified the Public Works Administration disapproved their $2,750,000 request to build the long-awaited edifice for the militia.

As reported in The Post earlier this week, the rejection of the project followed closely approval of $5,700,000 for the new Municipal Center, for which the Commissioners had requested less than half the amount granted.

It was rumored the officials had made a "deal" whereby the amount for the National Guard armory would be forfeited, and a larger request for the Municipal Center would be forthcoming.

There could be no confirmation, of course, of this rumor.

Hearings Begin Sept. 12.

It was pointed out, however, officials of the militia requested $2,500,000 in the 1940 budget estimates to erect a National Guard armory for white enlisted men. An amount of $200,000 they also requested for an armory for colored men.

Budget hearings are scheduled to begin September 12, but it is held unlikely the amounts requested by the militia for the construction of armories will be approved by the District Commissioners.

Col. John W. Oehmann, commander of the 121st Engineer Regiment and acting architectural adviser on the armory plans, was immediately notified by the District Commissioners of the rejection.

Oehmann Still Hoping.

Col. Oehmann said:

"I am so surprised, I have very little to say. I am still hopeful, however, it will be presented at the forthcoming Congress and be passed as an independent measure."

He said he would take the letter from PWA to Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commander of the District National Guard.

As originally planned the National Guard Armory was scheduled to be built on the south side of East Capitol street between Nineteenth and Twent-second streets. Six squares have been set aside for the development of the armory; four of the squares would be given to the militia by the Park and Planning Commission, and two by the District.

Col. Oehmann said the present antiquated structure on the northeast corner of Sixth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, is on the site earmarked by Congress for a new main Public Library.

Total Is $13,531,625.

To date the total amount allotted to the District as a loan and grant by the Public Works Administration is $13,531,625.

Included in this amount are the following:

A Municipal Court building, $1,500,000. A similar amount was requested by the District Commissioners.

Gallinger ward building, $750,000. A similar amount was requested.

Municipal Center, $5,700,000. Commissioners asked for $2,570,000.

A Gallinger ward building, including a 200-bed tuberculosis ward building, an addition to the nurses home and a new D. C. Morgue, $575,000. The Commissioners requested $675,000.

Public schools, $1,038,000. For this project the Commissioners asked $3,841,375.

A fire alarm system, $500,000. The Commissioners requested $1,000,000.

For a Sewer Department program, $758,625. The Commissioners requested $1,483,625.

The Post Corrects Error in Naming Mother of Twins

Offers from many States in the East and Midwest have been received by Mrs. Ella Stevens, of Alexandria, to adopt her twins, born at Alexandria Hospital a week ago. Mrs. Stevens, who is mother of a 6-year-old child, said she was unable to support the twins on her salary of $8 a week as a waitress.

Adoption requests have been referred by the mother to Mrs. T. Clifton Howard, juvenile court and probation officer, who has interviewed a score of applicants. The children, a girl and a boy, have not been named by Mrs. Stevens, who said she prefers to leave that to the foster parents.

In its issue of last Thursday, The Post inadvertently referred to Mrs. Irene Manley Roszel, superintendent of the hospital, as mother of the twins. This error The Post is glad to retract and sincerely deplores its occurrence.

Elder Lightfoot Solomon Michaux, the "Happy Am I" preacher, will begin his meetings at Griffith Stadium Sunday with a sermon on "How the Strange Woman Took Your Husband."

New songs will be offered each week by the chorus of 150. After the sermon on September 25 hundreds of candidates will be baptized in a big pool which will be built in the middle of the ball park diamond.

The elder will preach September 11 on "Can a Divorced Woman Enter Heaven;" September 18 on "The Signs of the End of the World," and September 25 on "Why You Can't Enter the Kingdom of Heaven If You Reject Being Baptised."

Milk-Bottle Loss Of $15,000 Vexes City's Dairymen

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 2 (AP).—Bottle, bottle, who has $15,000 worth of milk bottles?

Dairy owners appealed to milk buyers to be more careful about returning the bottles, explaining they had suffered a loss of $15,000, the amount needed to replace bottles lost or broken.

Quart size bottles, costing dealers about 7 cents, make from 6 to 91 trips to consumers. The average is about 35 trips, they said, before it becomes mislaid, broken, or used to store gasoline, paint, grease, dye and other liquids.

Sultan's Friends to Fete Him Today on Going to Fort Logan.

For the first time in many years—old hands at the District Building couldn't provide dates—the District Building will be ruled for one day, Tuesday, by one full-fledged Commissioner, Melvin C. Hazen.

Today, retiring Engineer Commissioner Dan I. Sultan will bid good-by to his many friends before leaving for his new post at Fort Logan Monday.

Wednesday night, Commissioner George E. Allen's resignation becomes effective. And since Lieut. Col. David McCoach, jr., who will succeed Sultan, will not arrive until next Wednesday, Commissioner Hazen will be virtually a "dictator" of the District affairs. No successor has been named for Allen.

Commissioner Hazen said officials were planning a party for the new Engineer Commissioner when he arrives next Wednesday to be sworn in.

In his first glimmer of returning consciousness he heard 14-month-old Billy calling "Daddy" from beyond the flames.

Fred LesCallett, only occupant of the car to escape injury, said his brother had taken him to a store to make a collection. They turned from Sheridan road into Nichols avenue, he said, and parked facing south on Nichols. Then he went across the street to the store.

"When I came out," he said, "Alfred saw me and started backing out to leave the parking space. Just then I heard the other coming over the top of the hill. It was coming like thunder.

"Halfway down the hill I heard its brakes go on and when I saw how fast it was coming I said, 'Oh, my God! They'll all be killed!'

"Just then they hit. They hit so hard Alfred's car was tossed up in the rear, glass spattered on the street, the doors burst open like there was an explosion inside. I saw Alfred go through the roof and others pitching out the doors. I didn't believe one would come out alive.

"Flames roared out of Alfred's car at once and would have got all of them if they hadn't been thrown out. I was already running across the street and I pulled Alfred out, and then I heard Billy away back under the other car. I got him too."

He said his brother's car was turned completely about but not overturned. Fire destroyed it. The front of the liquor car was crumpled.

Two revenue officers, who would neither identify themselves nor reveal details of the chase and crash, said they recovered 15 five-gallon cans of illegal liquor. Broken bottle glass littered the place for yards around.

Lee and Dorsey were rushed to Casualty. Lee still handcuffed, then transferred to Gallinger, where they were held for investigation.

James Ford, 24, colored, of Alexandria, Va., suffered injuries to his chest when struck by an auto at Eighth street and Mount Vernon place northwest. He was treated at Emergency Hospital.

Reporting she was struck by a street car near the Department of Commerce, Mattie Baker, 64, of New York City, walked into Emergency Hospital and asked for treatment of injuries to her side and ankle. Police are investigating the accident.

Beatrice, whose booking agents long ago changed her name to the more romantic Camille, is a former Central High School student who made good with Chester Hale and the Metropolitan Opera dance group. Nineteen and pretty, Beatrice is looking forward to a Hollywood engagement and maybe a movie contract.

"It's good to be home again, but it makes me a little nervous to dance before so many old friends," she confided between costume changes in her dressing room in a downtown theater. Appearing for the last time with Phil Harris and his orchestra, she is looking forward to a week's rest with her parents at 2701 Fourteenth street northwest before she journeys to Hollywood.

"Phil is a swell person and I love dancing to his music," Beatrice-Camille said, "but I'm sort of glad of the chance to get a rest before 'Pep' and I go to the Cocoanut Grove in Hollywood."

She Is Thrilled.

"My success and luck since I've started professional dancing have kept me thrilled every minute," said Camille, "but a chance to get in the movies sounds just too good."

According to her mother, Mrs. G. C. McGlasson, Beatrice first showed her dancing talent about the time she started to walk. At 10 she began to take lessons in Washington and when her parents moved to New York while she was still in high school, Beatrice studied with the Chester Hale group. After two years her talent pushed her right onto the Metropolitan Opera stage.

BEATRICE McGLASSON.

Grandfather, 73, Dances, Too.

"I found that dancing with a group of 32 other girls wasn't what I wanted, though," she declared, "so I started playing night clubs and hotels, doing a solo number. Then Ted Lewis introduced me to Pep."

Beatrice's 73-year-old grandfather, D. W. Tuck, who has never seen her dance, will make a special trip up from his home in Virginia in order to see her in action. Tuck, recently retired after more than 50 years as a railroad engineer, is quite a dancer himself, according to Beatrice.

Crowd to Greet Roosevelt at Maryland Line

To show the world that they look upon President Roosevelt as a guest and not an invader, Lewis Democrats from Baltimore and at least six counties of Maryland will greet the Chief Executive tomorrow when he crosses the District line into the Free State.

The President is expected to leave the White House at 10:30 a. m. for Morgantown, where he will inspect a proposed Potomac River bridge site. He will enter Prince Georges County at Good Hope hill on the Good Hope road at about 10:45.

The President is expected to continue along Routes 5 and 3 to La Plata and thence to Morgantown. Some of the welcomers on the Maryland line probably will follow him the entire distance, it was said.

T. Ormonde Nichols, general chairman of the reception committee and former president of the United Young Democratic Clubs of Montgomery County, said last night that he thought as many as "five or six thousand" people may be present to uphold Maryland's "tradition of hospitaltiy."

President Roosevelt will not stop, Nichols said, "but the American and State flags and the banners of welcome will show him that we are glad to have him in Maryland."

Nichols said that county chairmen of the reception committee will include Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Montgomery County; Cornelius Ryan and Kent Mulligan, Prince Georges County; Edward Burroughs, Charles County; Bruce Matthews, Calvert County, and Augustus Howard, Howard County. He added that delegations from Baltimore City and Frederick County also will be present.

Exchange Bank To Pay $48,000 To Depositors

2,000 Will Share Closed Institution's Fourth Dividend.

Approximately 2,500 depositors in the defunct International Exchange Bank of Washington will receive a fourth dividend amounting to about $48,000, according to an announcement made yesterday by the Comptroller of the Currency. Frederick J. Young, receiver for the institution, said last night he expected to begin payment by October 1.

The bank, only Italian banking establishment in the city, was ordered closed July 14, 1932, when its books showed assets of about $703,000 and liabilities of about $546,000.

Young said employes would begin immediately computation and printing of checks and receipts. He urged depositors to wait until they had received a postcard notifying them of a payment date. Young warned creditors they must bring their receiver's certificates and notice with them to obtain payment.

Tells Catholic Conclave 'Prejudices' Hamper Federal Jobs.

"Emotional prejudices" which hamper Government projects to aid the underprivileged were attacked by Miss Louise McGuire, of the Social Security Board, in an address before 125 Catholic college students yesterday.

Speaking at the opening luncheon of the three-day Federation of College Catholic Clubs conference at the Wardman Park Hotel, she denounced the use of such terms as "shovel-leaners," "chiselers" and "reds" in connection with relief clients.

"Minor defects or miscarriages of justice frequently obscure issues and cloud the vision and perspective," she declared. "Epithets satisfy the mind of those who will not take the trouble to think."

About 300 delegates had arrived last night, in time to attend a dinner dance at the Shoreham Hotel. The Newman Club of George Washington University and the Washington Newman Club alumni are hosts for the conference, which will continue through Monday.

Opening mass was celebrated yesterday at the Church of St. Thomas Apostle, by the Rev. John E. Cartwright, D. D., chaplain of the G. W. Newman Club, who also welcomed the delegates at the luncheon. The Rev. John W. Keogh, A. M., chaplain of the Middle Atlantic province of the federation, spoke at the service.

Father Cartwright was named chairman of the resolutions committee for the conference. On the nominations committee are Edward McGowan, N. E. Baudry, Gertrude Benson, Oliver Judge, Edward Lindner, the Rev. John Collins, N. Mallon, the Rev. F. A. Hartman and Thomas Bartley.

The Rev. William McDevitt was appointed to the Newman News committee; John Sullivan and John Ricketts to the finance committee, and the Rev. John Collins, Arthur Conley and Miss Benson to the Catholic Action committee.

Another business session will follow this morning's mass. Dr. John Fitzpatrick, dean of Columbus University Law School, will address the luncheon today on "Constitutional Democratic Government and Human Liberties."

Members of such organizations as the Young Communists, the American Youth Congress and the World Youth Conference were characterized as "very zealous and consuming idealists", by the Rev. Vincent Mooney, C. S. C., who addressed the gathering at a banquet at the Shoreham Hotel last night.

"They recommend the junking of religion or changing its theme to meet the needs of the times," he declared.

16 WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 3, 1938 X*

This Morning

With
Shirley Povich

Dallas, Tex., Sept. 2.—A well-rounded college education which includes a thorough course in football is a distinct asset these days. At least it is not to be sniffed at. Time was when a college diploma, if accompanied by a nickel, could be bartered for nothing more than a cup of coffee. But that old truism is now pretty well blasted. If the owner of the diploma happens to have majored in football, he possesses something very negotiable.

POVICH.

This is the season when the college boys cash in on their football reputations. We do not mean the lads who go into professional football. They are relatively few. We mean the boys who take their talents on tour in the "All Star Games" which, in recent years, have sprouted all over the Nation.

It is a new, harmless kind of racket that has sprung up. From game to game, the college graduates of last June travel. Many of the same faces which the Redskins saw leering at them from across the scrimmage line at Soldiers Field last Wednesday night they will see again in enemy uniforms in the Dallas Cotton Bowl Monday evening.

They can get $100 and up for the All Star appearance, the college boys can. And if their fame in college was national, the sponsors will bid even higher. A chap like "Whizzer" White made no less than $500 for his appearance in a Province "All Star" line-up against the Chicago Bears last night.

They Bid for 'Em!

It's the barnstorming season for the college stars of 1937. At Philadelphia last week, the road season opened with a game between the Phliadelphia pros and a group from Pennsylvania's colleges. The Redskins-All Stars battle at Chicago followed and promoters are still bidding for the services of the collegians for one-night stands.

Tomorrow, some of the boys will be in All-Ohio College line-up against the Cleveland Rams at Cleveland, and last night 35 collegians found employment in an "All Star Game" at St. Louis against the Chicago Cardinals. There's a game between an all-star outfit and the Chicago Bears at Birmingham on Friday, and of course the boys will be there, taking down their C-notes and their expense money.

It's a harmless racket, as we were saying. In fact, it hardly qualifies as a racket because charity is the excuse for most of the games. In the main, the lads are those who won't get a crack at making good in the pro leagues because the supply of college football players far exceeds the demand. After all, the ten National League teams hardly figure to take on a total of more than 50 new men from college ranks, and 50 college players do not represent a tither of the football playing graduates.

Pros Can't Do It.

The irony of it is, though, that these collegians who were forbidden to take money for playing football in their college days else it would stamp them as pros, are now cashing in to the exclusion of the out-and-out confirmed professionals.

For, while the college boys are paid generously for their part in these All-Star games, the pro players are playing for nothing. The guarantees go to the club owners. The pros' pre-season exhibition games come under the head of pre-season training and their pay does not start until the opening game of the league season.

And the college players who went on tour with the All-Star barnstormers will profit handsomely, compared to many of their brethren who decided to cast their lot with the pro clubs. When squad-cutting time comes for the pro teams a week hence, the collegians who lose out will have received nothing but their bumps for their efforts to make good. And they will have passed up those C-notes they could have commanded as All-Star barnstormers.

Good Old Schmidt.

To hear Texans tell it, the absent-minded professor among college coaches in Ohio State's Francis Schmidt, who served at Texas Christian University before being called to Ohio State's more abundant coaching life.

Well aware of his own penchant for forgetfulness, Schmidt has armed himself with a secretary and a notebook, that all of his ideas and observations may be recorded. He is supposed to have a file of the habits, records and potentialities of every player on both his own team and all teams on his schedule.

When not accompanied by his secretary, it was Schmidt's habit to whip out a little black book and jot down ideas for new plays whenever he conceived one. The story goes that he was driving from his home to one of the T. C. U. practice sessions when he suddenly noted that the oil gauge on his dashboard registered empty.

Driving into a filling station, he commanded the attendant to drain the remaining oil and refill. While sitting in his car he suddenly conceived a new play. Whipping out his book, he outlined the play fully, and after 15 minutes of studious figuring, was satisfied that there could be no adequate defense for it.

Then, looking at his watch and discovering that he would soon be late for practice, he eased himself out from behind the steering wheel to get at his money and pay off the station attendant.

He opened the door of his car, backed out of his seat and fell ten feet to the ground, unaware that his car had been perched up on a pneumatic elevator.

College Players Find Pro Football a Real Tough Grind, Baugh Says

By "Slingin' Sammy" Baugh.
(Forward Passing Champion, National Football League.)

Dallas, Tex., Sept. 2.—If I had any lingering doubts that there was a difference between professional football players and college players they vanished one day last December.

SAMMY BAUGH.

That was the afternoon that the Redskins were playing the Chicago Bears for the National Professional championship at Wrigley Field. I was throwing a few passes for the Redskins that day and almost as regularly as I threw 'em I was getting knocked down.

The fellow who was piling into me most of the afternoon was big Pete Bausch, the Bears' roving center. He'd charge through the line and chase me for yards while I was looking for a receiver. And eventually he'd hit me. Usually it would be after I had gotten rid of the ball, but sometimes before. Anyway, this Bausch was in my hair all day.

Bausch is a 220-pounder, but it always felt as if I was hit by a ton when that fellow let me have it. Sometimes he knocked me down and sometimes we both went down. But Bausch always came up smiling. I usually came up with a new ache or pain.

After he had flattened me a couple of times, piling in there like he was going to break me to pieces, he'd help me up and say:

Then, on the very next play, perhaps, he'd boom into me again and I'd think that the stands fell on me. And Pete would get up smiling and say again:

From what I have been able to gather, the pro football player will hit you four times harder and knock your four times farther, and then when his work on the play is done, he'll pick you up tenderly and help you to your feet.

The college player isn't apt to do that. The chances are he'll knock you flat, leave you there and swagger away like a tough guy. You know the type. There are a lot of that kind in college football. I guess they aren't to be blamed too much, though. Most every kid passes through the same stage of trying to be a tough guy.

Don't misunderstand me, though. I haven't tried to be tough. I was always smart enough not to attempt that. In the first place, I'm skinny as football players go and am not built to be a tough guy. Besides, there are too many big bruisers in pro football who might get mad about it.

When I refer to a fellow being tough, I don't mean simply rough. I mean vicious. There's a great difference. A football player can be rough without being tough. He can give all he's got without being tough and vicious about it.

The fellow who is smart and fast and has football sense will probably go far in pro football if he's big and rough in addition. But if he overdoes the rough stuff—if he is on the tough side—he doesn't figure to last long in the pro game.

The pros themselves don't like this tough stuff. The game is a livelihood for them and any time a fellow goes out of his way to pull things that might maim a guy and end his football career, he's a marked man. He doesn't even have the sympathy of his teammates. And of course, the opposition won't be disposed to be gentle with him. Before the game is over, he'll end up thinking an army has hit him. And he'll probably be on the bench in the care of the club physician.

The tough guy is the fellow who tries to get over a sneak punch or bangs into a defenseless ball carrier, or piles on to a fellow who has already been stopped cold. As I was saying, they don't last long in this league. There isn't a veteran in the pro league who is known as a tough guy. Most of the toughies are the first-year fellows who come out of college ranks under the impression that they have to act tough to make good.

Any football player knows when a tackler is roughing him and when he is simply being tackled hard. The hardest that I was ever hit in my life was by a fellow who made one of the cleanest tackles I ever saw.

That was in the College All Stars-Green Bay game last year at Soldiers' Field. I was playing safety man for the All Stars and I intercepted a Green Bay pass. I tore down the sidelines and began to vision a touchdown when all of a sudden somebody hit me.

It was Lou Gordon, one of the Packers' tackles. I never was hit so hard in my life. My teeth rattled and it seemed as if every bone in my body was shouting for help as I went down with Gordon on top of me. I was knocked dizzy. But there was nothing dirty about that tackle. It was just a great tackle by a good football player. Gordon was rough, but he wasn't vicious about it.

I don't believe anybody was ever hurt by a clean tackle. And the fellow who tries to get in a sneak punch or really hurt somebody with a tackle is apt to lose his man. It doesn't pay.

Al Hits 20th To Top Mark Set by Goslin

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Philadelphia, Sept. 2.—Al Simmons' anub-nosed bat supplied the music today as Washington marched to a 4-2 victory over the Philadelphia Athletics in the first of a two-game series.

Two tremendous hits thundered off the swaggering veteran's club during the afternoon, rending huge gaps in the Athletics' confidence and placing victory far beyond their grasp, two hits that helped interrupt another losing streak of three games that left the Nats mired in the second division after a disastrous home stand.

SIMMONS.

The first, a line drive triple, scored the run that clinched Washington's victory, and the second disappeared into the upper tier of the leftfield stands for Simmons' twentieth home run of the season—a new record for a Washington player. The previous record of 19 was established by "Goose" Goslin back in the pre-depression days of 1926.

And while Simmons was tattooing the Athletics' hurling, young Kendall Chase was subduing the Mackmen with a puzzling assortment of twisters that kept them scoreless until the seventh inning, and completely at his mercy. Chase wasn't so much as mildly menaced by his opponents, allowing only seven scattered hits, while fanning three and walking as many more.

Zeke Comes Through.

It was a performance similar to the job he did on Cleveland earlier in the week, and again it was his own miscue that cost him a run, for had he not dropped Zeke Bonura's throw on Seibert's grounder in the eighth, the side would have been retired with no score. The error permitted Finney to score the A's second run of the game. But Chase clamped down at that juncture and won going away.

Nelson Potter, Philadelphia's starting pitcher, gave up a run in the second inning when Myer beat out a slow roller to Seibert at first, and went to second on West's single to left. Ferrell grounded to Werber and was safe when Weber's throw pulled Seibert off first. Chase forced Ferrell, Ambler to Sperry and Myer scored on the play.

In the fifth Lewis doubled down the rightfield line with one away. Travis lined to Johnson, but Bonura came to Lewis' rescue with a stinging single to center. Simmons' triple scored Zeke.

The A's converted Johnson's triple to center and an infield out into a run in the seventh, and it was Finney's triple in the eighth that paved the way for their second run. He scored, as noted above, when Chase let Bonura's throw trickle through his fingers.

Red Ruffing Wins No. 20

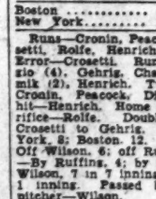
By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 2.—Backed by the first full team the Yankees have put on the field in a week, big Red Ruffing became the major leagues' first 20-game pitching winner of the year today by hurling the world champions to a 6-to-4 victory over the Boston Red Sox.



RUFFING.

Along with the return of Red Rolfe, Bill Dickey and George Selkirk from the hospital list, Big Red also had the advantage of a slugging show put on by Joe DiMaggio in reaching the "double-ten" hurling mark for the third straight season.

DiMaggio whacked his twenty-seventh homer with two aboard in the first inning, singled and scored in the third, and then doubled to drive another marker across during the game-winning rally in the seventh.

Ruffing's performance was considerably off his usual form. He was tagged for 13 hits, while the Yanks collected only eight off Jackie Wilson and Emerson Dickman. But Red was given air-tight fielding support with men on the bags, particularly by DiMaggio and Second Baseman Joe Gordon.

The win boosted the Yankees' American League lead to 14 full games over the second-place Sox.

The Sox came back to tie it up, however, Ben Chapman singling a run over in the fourth, Pinky Higgins doing the same in the fifth, and Vosmik driving two across in the sixth with a base hit to center.

Redskins' Rookies on Spot In Monday's Game at Dallas

They Either Have to Make Good or Be Released; Baugh Will See Very Little Action.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Dallas, Tex., Sept. 2.—In Dallas Cotton Bowl on Monday night, the Redskins' rookie backs will be battling not only a collection of Texas all-stars but the threat of release.

The Redskins' backfield duties Monday will devolve almost entirely on the rookie Dick Tuckey, Jim Abbitt, Jay Turner, Leroy Campbell and Bill Hartman. Because only Ernie Pinckert and Max Krause of the veteran group are free from injuries.

The seriousness of Baugh's injury is not being broadcast to Texas folks for fear of affecting the gate receipts, but it is known that the Texas fans will see very little of Baugh on Monday night. He will merely put in an appearance at the start of each half, doing no running and no kicking but merely passing.

Baugh to Take It Easy.

When the Redskins are on the defense Baugh will be taken out of the line-up under the special rule for the game which permits free substitutions at any time. Slingin' Sammy will not figure in any of the Redskins' practices, but has been instructed to keep off his injured foot as much as possible. Barring further injury, he is expected to be ready for the league opener on September 11.

Indications are that Head Coach Ray Flaherty will cut the Redskins' squad to the required limit of 30 immediately after the game, and two backs are among the three men slated to go.

Tuckey has virtually clinched a job for himself as Baugh's understudy, but for the others—Abbitt, Turner, Campbell and Hartman—Monday's game will be their final test.

Turner was used for a few minutes against the All-Stars at Chicago, but neither Campbell, Abbitt nor Hartman have been tested under fire. Abbitt, hailed as a passing and kicking star, has been overshadowed by Tuckey in the battle for a job, and Campbell, the Western Maryland ace, is as yet untried. Also in that class is Hartman, the stocky runner and passer from Georgia.

Workout in Bowl.

Flaherty took his squad to the Cotton Bowl this afternoon for a workout despite the scorching heat. Because if it, the practice was restricted to a light drill on formations.

There is no disposition on the part of the Redskins to underestimate the Texas All-Stars. Never has an invading professional team beaten the Texans in the early season game. Twice the Chicago Bears have gone down to defeat here.

George Young, strapping tackle, who will play with the Texans, will join the Redskins immediately after the game. He introduced himself today to Coach Flaherty who looked approvingly at his 6 feet 2 inches and 215 pounds.

It was reunion in Dallas for Slingin' Sammy Baugh and the former Edmonia Smith, his bride of a few months. Mrs. Baugh later in the season will join her husband in Washington.

Owner George Marshall, who accompanied his team here, retains fond memories of Dallas. It was here that he was paid $100,000 two years ago for serving as head of the Texas Fair Sports Committee.

Riley Smith May Return to Team For First Game

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chicago, Sept. 2.—Smiling and apparently in a happy frame of mind, Riley Smith, Washington Redskin quarterback injured in the All-Star game Wednesday night, prepared to leave for Washington tomorrow, confident of being able to appear in his team's line-up for the opening game of the season, against the Philadelphia Eagles, September 11.

Smith, who played throughout most of the game in which his mates bowed to the College All-Stars despite his painful injury, will be able to walk to the train, according to Dr. Gilman W. Petit, the attending physician. X-rays taken of the injured leg disclosed no bone injury, the doctor said, and added that a rest probably would bring a complete recovery. He hesitated, however, to predict how long the recovery will take.

Merrick Captures City Peewee Title

Behind the five-hit hurling of Vino Amorisi, the Merrick Boys Club captured the city peewee title by downing the Southeast Branch Boys Club, 8 to 3, yesterday. G. Pigott led the winners' offensive, while Monaco, of the losers, snared the hitting honors by collecting four hits in four trips to the plate.

Cards Top Bucs, 11-10

Gutteridge Paces 'Gang' With Homer, Triple.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Sept. 2.—The revived St. Louis Cardinals went on a scoring spree for three innings today and then just nosed out the National League leading Pittsburgh Pirates, League leading Pittsburgh Pirates, 11 to 10, in the only game on the senior circuit program.

RIZZO.

The win sliced half a game from the Bucs' league lead, leaving them 6½ games in front of the idle Cincinnati Reds and Chicago Cubs.

Paced by Don Gutteridge, whose homer, triple and single drove five runs in, the Cards landed on Cy Blanton and Joe Bowman in the fourth, fifth and sixth frames to score all their runs.

After thus spotting the Gas House Gangsters an eight-run edge, the Bucs came back in the late frames to drive Lefty Bob Weiland to the showers under a six-run barrage in the seventh, and scored another in the ninth. But with the tying run on second base, Fiddler McGee got Al Todd on an outfield fly to end the game and save the fifteenth win of the year for Weiland.

It's Budge-Bromwich, Riggs-Quist in Davis Cup Play

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer.

Red Defender.

Of course, I may not be fully informed on some of the situations that have developed in the last few weeks, having been rather removed from the scene of operations in the sphere of sports, but bending an ear to the ground, instead of an elbow to the ceiling, I seem to hear some strange sounds.

VIDMER.

For instance, what's all this about the Australians threatening to lift the Davis Cup from our American forces? I hear that Donald Budge and company are favorites all right, but only slight favorites. And it seems rather ridiculous. In fact, I feel quite confident that the outcome of the challenge road matches which start in Philadelphia today, may be taken as a matter of course.

As long as I can remember, and my memory seems to be going back along the sports trail farther and farther every year, the country which had the outstanding player in the world always has won the Davis Cup, and the chances are, under the present system, it always will.

Without going too deep into the history of the tennis classic, but starting after the war, there was Bill Tilden. He was an American, and in the first matches after he came along the United States lifted the cup from Australia. Of course, Tilden was ably assisted in that invasion of the Antipodes by little Bill Johnston. Still, I think th: he would have brought back the trophy had any number of players been coupled with Big Bill of Germantown.

He was the greatest player in the world, and as long as he continued to be the greatest player the cup was safe for the United States. Then came Henri Cochet to conquer Tilden and take command of the situation on the courts. The cup went to France and stayed there until Fred Perry rose to the heights where he could beat any other player across the nets.

One-Man Teams.

It was a natural transition for the cup to go to England, where it remained until Mr. Perry turned professional, leaving the amateur throne to young, red-headed Donald Budge. That was last year, and the result was that the cup came back to these shores. As Budge still is the greatest amateur player on the courts and remains an amateur, there seems no reason to become alarmed about the possibility of Australia lifting the international trophy.

There are, of course, two possible exceptions to this theory. Back there in '32 and '33, someone might point out that Ellsworth Vines was the greatest amateur player in action and in neither year could the Americans win the cup. But Vines' supremacy was challenged by two others — Perry and Jack Crawford, of Australia. He wasn't absolutely supreme as Tilden, Cochet and Perry were in their eras or as Budge is at present. Nor was he at his best in the critical matches, nor did he play in the doubles.

TILDEN.

Budge, on the other hand, stands head and shoulders above any amateur weilding a racket with one or both hands today, and he not only will play in two of the singles matches, but also team with Mako in the doubles. This situation will start the Americans two up with three matches to go, in addition they will have an edge in the doubles with Budge on the court and the other two singles matches, with Bobby Riggs representing the United States, appear no worse than an even bet. In fact, it would not be in the least surprising to see the Americans win all five matches against the Australians, which ceratinly fails to explain the short odds and the feeling of excitement over the outcome born of uncertainty.

When Chips Are Drawn.

Alarmists appear to be pointing to Budge's recent cold as a serious hazard to the chances of the United States. And the answer to that is, Budge could beat either Bromwick or Quist, the Australian aces, if he had double pneumonia. They are eager to recall that Bromwick beat Budge a couple of times during the red head's visit to Australia last winter. And the answer to that is, both defeats came in minor tournaments; in the Australian championships, the only event in which Budge was particularly interested, he bowled over Mr. Bromwich, 6—1, 6—1, 6—1, if my memory is not at fault.

So I think we may rest easily over the week-end and not feel particularly disturbed about losing the Davis Cup. As long as Don Budge is around and eligible, there is no cause for alarm.

I don't believe I can hear any rumblings of dissent to the statement that Budge is the greatest amateur in the world today. He holds every major title that the courts offer and there isn't a player around who even can extend him. Last year there was some suggestion that Gottfried von Cramm, of Germany, might give him a battle, but the he[illegible] otherwise occupied this campaign and the nationals offer no opposition for the California comet.

Australian Hopes Soar After Draw

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Sept. 2.—Australia's hopes of capturing the elusive Davis Cup skyrocketed today as the luck of the draw pitted Bobby Riggs against the veteran Adrian Quist and Don Budge against unorthodox Jack Bromwich in the opening singles matches for the emblem of international team tennis supremacy.

Though the Americans, from nonplaying Capt. Walter Pate to Budge and Riggs, said the draw didn't mean a thing to them, the aussies greeted the opening pairings with whoops that echoed over the Germantown Cricket Club where the international adversaries of the bounding ball will fight it out for the cup tomorrow, Sunday and Monday. "To hear the boys from "down under" cheer, one would feel their chances had been improved 100 per cent.

RIGGS.

"It's just the kind of a draw we prayed for," said Harry Hopman, non-playing leader of the Australians. "Now I believe we'll give America a really great battle, though I realize with Budge against us it will take the best tennis we have all the way."

"The draw suited us, too," said Capt. Pate. "I think our team is good enough to win under any circumstances. After all, the match line-up must be reversed for the final two singles Monday, Budge meeting Quist and Riggs tackling Bromwich. So what's the difference?"

Tennis experts were divided. Some thought Riggs was almost sure to get licked by the more experienced Quist, thereby shoving America into the hole at the start. Others figured Riggs stood even a better chance against Quist in the opening match.

As proud as a peacock over his selection for the cup squad, Riggs was deadly serious for a change and vowed he'd prove his class to the world in the first match by taking Quist.

"When Riggs is that serious, he's quite apt to lick any player in the world," commented Vincent Richards, the professional star who was among those who thought the draw meant nothing—that it would take pretty much of a miracle for the Aussies to win.

No one worried Budge. The red-headed master of world amateur tennis was sniffing from a head cold and he looked weary but in his final tune-up today he appeared his real self. Budge, despite his all-conquering hero role, is still young and impressionable enough to get all heated up over the Australian challenge.

Nothing was said about the doubles, to be played Sunday. However, everyone knows it'll be Budge and Gene Mako against Quist and Bromwich. Don and Gene gave the Aussies a sound trouncing in the National doubles at Brookline last week and are confident of doing it again.

The singles matches tomorrow and Monday start at 3 p. m., and the doubles Sunday at 4 p. m. (E.S.T.). Clear weather was forecast.

The grass playing surface at the Germantown Club was in poor condition—skimpy in spots and pock-marked. All the players worried over the grass but it was fair for one as for all. If there were any advantage it probably favored the Americans.

A capacity throng of 9,000 is expected to view the opening singles tomorrow. The wooden circus seats, thrown together hastily this week about the courts, were not quite finished but will be ready a few hours in advance of match time.

The consensus among the experts was for an American victory. Uncle Sam had Budge and Rudge had Mako and that seemed all that will be necessary.

Channing and Mather Reach Finals in Middle Atlantic

By Jack Munhall.

Charley Channing and Ed "Red" Mather, unlouted and unseeded surprises of the tournament, and top-ranked Dooly Mitchell and Barney Welsh yesterday advanced to the final doubles round of The Post-Middle Atlantic tennis championship, before a large gallery at Edgemoor Club.

These teams will meet for the title this afternoon at Edgemoor immediately following the singles final which is scheduled between Welsh and Hugh Lynch at 2 o'clock.

The easy 6—2, 6—3 semifinal victory scored by Welsh and Mitchell over Lynch and Ed Baker was more or less expected but the decisive walloping Channing and Mather handed fourth-seeded "Baron" Bill Breese and Buddy Adair left the crowd agast. Even the straight set scores of 6—2, 6—4 fail to clearly denote their superiority.

With Channing setting the pace with beautiful volleying and a well-rounded game, the red-thatched Mather and his youthful partner completely outclassed the slugging Breese and Adair and indicated they are in top form for their meeting with the District champions today.

Breese and Adair, inconsistent at the best, scored more than twice as many placements as did Mather and Channing, who have been playing together only a few weeks, but for every shot they put away, they drove two outside. It was chiefly their inability to keep baseline shots inside the court that spelled their defeat.

Channing, University of Virginia junior, continuing to show remarkable daily improvement, easily was the outstanding player on the court. Time and again his skillful volleying brought the crowd to its feet and he was a tower of strength in the back court with a strong forehand and an accurate Western backhand game.

Only in the ninth and tenth of the second set did Breese and Adair threaten the winners. Trailing 3 to 5, they suddenly began to click, and on Adair's service they pulled to 4 to 5 in the most thrilling game of the match. The score was deuced five times and Breese and Adair fought off a match point before Mather finally netted a shot by Adair to give them the decision. Mather, however, shakily held his service to close out the match.

Mitchell and Welsh were slow in starting, dropping the first two games of the opening set as they consistently overdrove the baseline. But soon their far superior forcing games asserted themselves and the match quickly was transformed into a rout.

They captured the third and fourth games to square the set and then grabbed the next five, with loss of only 10 points, being taken to deuce only in the eighth game. In this set the terrific forehand blasts of Welsh and the slower but just as effective drop shots of Mitchell vied for honors.

The second set was a walkaway, although Lynch and Baker, according to the score, made a better showing. Welsh and Mitchell started off by breaking Lynch's service, dropped Welsh's service and then swept through three straight games to take a 4-1 advantage. Baker halted their march when he held service in the seventh game and then when he and Lynch broke through Mitchell's service in the eighth it appeared they might come back.

Vic Sampson Will Return

George Washington officials yesterday received with ill-concealed delight the news that Vic Sampson, midget halfback star, had decided to forsake his hotel position to return to school this fall and finish his grid career. He will report for opening practice a week from today.

Sampson told Colonial officials that he had arranged with the management of Hotel Annapolis to be furloughed during the football season. He will return there December 1 on a part-time basis.

Sampson, a better-than-average student, is entering his senior year and can fulfill his graduation requirements by June, but until yesterday he had considered his future in the hotel business so promising that he was doubtful of returning to George Washington on a full-time schedule.

Sampson, though he weighs only 165 pounds, was the sparkplug of the Colonial eleven last season and his return will immeasurably bolster a non-too-strong G. W. backfield. He gained more than 600 yards last fall, won unanimous all-District selection as a halfback and was mentioned on several All-American teams.

He plans to spend next week at his home in Watseka, Ill., work out with the local high school team, with which he once played, and return here in time for next Saturday's practice.

7 Up Nine Active.

The Seven Up Athletic Club will travel to Frederick tomorrow in an effort to break the 20-game winning streak of the Frederick Hustlers, and on Monday they will engage Herndon in a Labor Day tussle.

Vic Ghezzi, Hogan Lead

Youths Top Field in Hershey Golf.

By the Associated Press.

Hershey, Pa., Sept. 2.—Two par-busting youths, Vic Ghezzi, 25, and Ben Hogan, 26, today topped a field of 16 top flight pro golfers in giving a surprise twist to the Hershey round robin four-ball invitation tourney.

Ghezzi, of Deal, N. J., and Hogan, of White Plains, N. Y., humbled the lanky Henry Picard, hometown pro, and Johnny Revolta, of Evanston, Ill., 5 up in a first round 18-hole match that saw Picard and Revolta get seven birdies and 11 pars for a seven-under par 66 and yet fail to win a hole.

With each getting six birdies, Ghezzi and Hogan posted 12 birds and six pars for a 12-under-par 61 to lead in the round robin for first prize of $1,000.

Pennsylvania's "neighboring team"—Byron Nelson, of Reading, and Big Ed Dudley, of Philadelphia—was in second place, two points behind by virtue of a 3 up triumph over Ky Laffoon, of Chicago, and Dick Metz, of Lake Forest, Ill. Nelson got a 6 under par 66 for the best individual score.

Jimmy Thomson, of Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., and Lawson Little, of Chicopee, Mass., came from behind to beat Gene Sarazen, Brookfield Center, Conn., and Johnny Hines, Great Neck, N. Y., 1 up, when Sarazen missed a short 2-foot putt on the eighteenth.

Paul Runyan, of White Plains, N. Y., National P. G. A. champion, paired with Sammy Snead, of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., to score a 1 up victory over Harry Cooper and Horton Smith, both of Chicopee, Mass.

MUNGO.

Dr. Robert F. Hyland, Cardinal Club surgeon, who examined the pair here, said after a telephone conference with Larry MacPhail, Dodgers manager, who was in Cincinnati, that both would return to their homes for the remainder of the season.

"Neither pitcher will need an operation to correct his ailments," Dr. Hyland said, "but both need rest.

"I informed Mungo he should not touch a baseball for four or five months, and MacPhail then agreed to let Mungo off for the rest of the season.

"He also gave La Master permission to return home, as rest also is the best treatment for his arm."

Post Scripts

Observers who watched the St. John's Prep football squad in training camp at Cedarhurst, Md., last week predict one of the best Cadet elevens in years, barring injuries, of course . . . Coach Gene Augustefer is said to have an unusually fine regular combination but needs reserves . . . Duke University's hopes for a successful grid campaign received a rude jolt yesterday when George McAfee, triple threat southpaw back, was not on hand for opening practice . . . McAfee is in Duke hospital with a foot ailment and doctors say he's out indefinitely" . . . Have you noticed that Al Simmons has hit 5 more homers than doubles and that all Bluege's extra base hits this season have been two baggers?

VAUGHAN.

The median height of the University of Pennsylvania football squad is 6 feet, the average weight 191 pounds . . . Incidentally the Quakers have only two weeks to condition themselves for their opening game with Albright, September 23 . . . With prospects for its greatest eleven in years, Georgia opened practice yesterday . . . Competent officials who delve in such matters, appraise Joe DiMaggio's worth to the Yankees in dollars and cents as $300,000 . . . Joe Medwick is rated next at $290,000; Greenberg, at $250,000, and Arky Vaughan, Vander Meer and Charley Gehringer at $150,000 . . . If Frankie Pytlak and Henry Helf were aiming at an altitude record when they caught baseballs released from a height of 707 feet on August 20, they had better look for higher buildings . . . For the highest catch on record is credited to George Kelly, former Rochester and New York Giant first baseman who grabbed a toss from an airplane flying better than 770 feet at Kelley Field, Tex., in 1918 . . . And to make his feat more difficult, Kelly used a first baseman's glove, whereas Helf and Pytlak used catcher's mitts . . . Red McCormick, Cincinnati first baseman looms as the first N. Rise and Shine Captures Sandy Springs Purse at Marlboro

Pays Backers $11; Cancel Takes Place

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Marlboro, Md., Sept. 2.—Rise and Shine, a daughter of Big Blaze, stole the spotlight this sunny afternoon here in Prince Georges County. The 4-year-old plater threw dust in the faces of seven others in leading all the way in the Sandy Spring Purse, feature event of the program. Paying an $11 mutuel despite the fact that she had won her previous race, Rise and Shine completed the 5½ furlongs two lengths in front of Cancel with Ever Grand, the favorite, third.

Rise and Shine, ridden by Apprentice Jockey W. Kirk, turned in the good time of 1:09 over the fast track.

The race was a parade of the first three horses. Rise and Shine, Cancel and Ever Grand were in order throughout. Star Mint gained much ground, but lost all chance when she was away poorly.

The combination of Jockey Palumbo and Trostar proved the right one for the favorite players in the first race. The son of Trojan came home a length and a half in advance of Proven with Dunsany third. The winner paid $4.20.

Highdear with Jockey Cecil Coffman aboard, completed a $21.10 daily double by winning the second race. The filly finished four lengths in front of Justa Jimmie with Quick Vine third. Coffman was set down for the one remaining day of the meeting because he blocked Timber Storm, one that finished third. Justa Jimmie was second to the $11.30 shot.

Boro Poker led every inch of the way in the third race, much to delight of his backers, who collected a $6.40 mutuel. The big horse saved ground and won by two and a half lengths. Philigal and Bursting were nearest at the end. Jockey Skeets Holland, who returned to the saddle recently after recuperating from a broken arm, handled the winner.

BORO POKER took command in opening furlong, saved ground while setting pace and was not seriously menaced. PHILIGAL, off alertly, was closest to pace throughout and easily held BURSTING safe. The latter was away poorly and hung after getting within striking distance. MISS TROY had early speed and weakened. BLOND REEL was through after three furlongs. STAR TURN ran out badly at stretch turn.

Cotton Yields To Hedge Sales

New York, Sept. 2 (AP).—Cotton receded from early slight advances today as a steady flow of small Southern hedge selling orders filled the demand. December reacted from 8.33 to 8.26 and closed at the low, with final prices 2 to 4 points net lower.

The market opened 1 point lower to 1 higher, and soon moved up to net advances of 2 to 4 points on trade and foreign buying. Some scattering demand was influenced by the firmer tone of the stock market, but local interests were inclined to sell as Southern selling, through spot houses and brokers with co-operative connections developed.

A private crop estimate for 11,-160,000 bales represented an increase of 380,000 and another for a crop of 12,010,000 bales was 484,000 bales over last month.

Utility Holdouts Win $65 Per Bond

New York, Sept. 2 (AP).—Bondholders of Tennessee Public Service Co. who were "holdouts" against the deal by which control of the company passed to the City of Knoxville and the TVA, will pocket for each $1,000 bond held $65 more than was received by holders who deposited under the TVA plan, it was learned today.

The non-assenting group, which holds approximately $1,050,000 of the bonds, or 15 per cent of the total, will present them to the Tennessee Co. for retirement at $1,040 and interest. Holders of the 85 per cent who deposited received $975 for each bond held under the terms of the TVA preposal for absorption of the property.

B. & O. Reveals Plan to Modify Bond Interest

Reduction From $31,421,-742 to $19,644,679 a Year Is Proposed.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Sept. 2.—The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad announced today it had filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission in Washington an application for permission to modify interest charges and maturities of its own securities and certain obligations of its operated subsidiaries. The B. & O. board of directors approved the proposal earlier this week. If approved by the ICC, it will be submitted to holders of the various affected obligations.

As presented to the ICC, the railroad said, the plan provides for extension of large nearby maturities and reduces, for eight years, the annual fixed interest of the company and subsidiaries from $31,421,742 to $19,644,679.

Contingent Liability.

Savings in interest charges will become a contingent liability under the plan and will be payable if earned after deducting not more than 2 per cent of total operating expenses each year for additions and betterments to the property.

A substantial portion of surplus earnings, if any, will be applied to a sinking fund for debt retirement, maintenance of working capital and for capital investments.

Twenty-six direct company obligations and nine separate obligations of operated subsidiaries are covered in the proposed schedule of interest reduction.

President Daniel Willard, in a letter to all security holders of the railroad, said the management had decided that modification of some of the B. & O. interest charges and maturities would be cheaper, simpler and more satisfactory than a reorganization effected through usual legal procedures.

Exchanges to Observe Week-end Holidays

New York, Sept. 2 (AP).—Plans were laid today for a general observance of the Labor Day weekend by security and commodity exchanges and banks throughout the United States and Canada. With the exception of cotton and cottonseed oil futures, local commodity markets continue their Saturday closing rule in effect during the summer. Other exchanges in and out of New York will do business tomorrow.

Monday, Labor Day, will be a holiday for all important centers.

British and continental financial and commodity exchanges will operate as usual on Monday.

Indications of Temporary Truce in Europe Spurs Moderate Market Advance.

New York, Sept. 2.—Unexpected news from Europe that Hitler is willing to continue conversations, without military action, on the Czechoslovakian issue until mid-September, gave security markets an incentive to advance today after a dull and irregular start. Prices moved up rather sharply on a flurry of buying when the news was flashed from the other side.

At the same time, depressed foreign exchanges picked up from the new lows they had recorded earlier. Cotton and wheat went nowhere in particular, the former losing 2 to 4 points on announcement of private crop estimates larger than a month ago. Wheat ended ¾ up to ½ cent lower.

Short covering and some estimated buying for foreign account aided stocks. Stores, motors, steels and coppers advanced quickly on very moderate dealings, but all groups showed strength, including the rails. The list closed with gains in pivotal shares running from 1 to 3 points, the composite for the 100 stocks showing a rise of 0.90 point, or about double the drop of the previous day. Transactions, reflecting holiday influences, amounted to but 553,560 shares.

Motor issues again were prominent in the active division of the market, General Motors being the day's leader with a rise of 1⅞ points. Chrysler spurted more than 3 and Yellow Truck firmed better than a point. Some of the amusements, including Paramount and Twentieth Century-Fox, were in active request at higher prices. Montgomery Ward paced the mail order group with an advance of 2 points. Steel common was up 2, Bethlehem 2⅝ and National more than a point.

Rail Bonds Recover.

Listed bonds developed an improved tone in quiet dealings today. Speculative carrier issues swung forward readily, in response to the same factors that lifted equities. Nickel Plate bonds snapped back with especial vigor after their long decline. High-grade investment bonds were dull and motionless. In the foreign section Czech issues advanced, apparently because of sinking fund purchases. Total turnover was $3,830,000.

The speculative rail group attracted most attention from the few brokers and traders who remained in the city. Nickel Plate bonds gained 3 to 6 points in fairly active dealings, and other borderline rails also improved. Intermediate-priced carrier bonds were in quiet demand. Holding company issues failed to disclose anything new, while communications bonds drifted lower. Local traction issues were irregular.

United States Treasury certificates moved in a narrow range, with the small losses in some issues offset by equally small gains in others. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations were dull. Highest grade rail, utility and industrial bonds held to former levels.

In the foreign section, Czech bonds gained 4½ and 5 points, although little investment interest was expressed in the securities. Foreign bond men attributed the gains in these circumstances to sinking-fund purchases. High-grade foreigns of Australian, Canadian and Scandinavian origin were firm. Japanese and Italian groups were irregular, while default bonds remained in their usual comatose state.

Government Asks Wheat Rate Cut

By the Associated Press.

The Agriculture Department, attempting to stimulate grain exports, yesterday sought a reduction in freight rates on wheat moving from Central and Western producing areas to seaboard shipping points. It asked presidents of Eastern and Southern railroads to accept a reduction to help dispose of 100,000,000 bushels of surplus American wheat in foreign markets.

In a letter to the presidents, M. L. Wilson, acting Secretary of Agriculture, asked that rates be cut in accordance with a suggestion recently made by several Eastern railroad executives. The suggestion later was rejected by the Association of American Railroads. The proposed rates would have been about 50 per cent lower than those now prevailing, officials said, or about the same as those charged by boats plying the Great Lakes from Chicago to Buffalo.

Wilson said the railroads, by cutting rates, could "materially assist" the Government in its export program. The Government is buying wheat and selling it to exporters at reduced prices to help them meet foreign competition.

Wheat Prices Dip in Light Transactions

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 2.—Transactions to even up accounts before the Labor Day holiday or to switch hedges into deferred contracts kept the wheat market within a narrow range today. After nervous fluctuations, prices wound up fractionallly lower than yesterday.

The market derived a little support from expansion of the Government's export subsidy purchasing program to include all grades and types of wheat and flour exportable but most dealers preferred the sidelines. The fact that the energetic manner in which the subsidy plan was being pushed helped to depress foreign markets where the bulk of exports were received put a brake on buying here.

Prices at Liverpool, the world's leading distributive market, fell to new three-year lows, losing ⅛ to 1⅛ cents, and the spread between that market and Chicago was narrowed. The discount at which American wheat sold in the British market compared with other competing grain widened.

Wheat closed ¼ higher to ½ lower compared with yesterday's finish, September 62½, December 64-64⅛; corn 1-1½ down, September 50⅝-50¾, December 49-49⅛; oats unchenged to ⅛ off; rye ⅛-¼ down; lard unchanged to 2 higher.

Gold Importations $28,720,863 in Week

By the Associated Press.

The Commerce Department said yesterday that gold imports continued in large volume in the week ended August 26. Inflow amounted to $28,720,863 in the week, a figure well ahead of most summer months, although $21,000,000 less than the preceding week.

Financial circles have attributed the inflow in part to the troubled European situation, which has caused many foreigners to send funds here for safekeeping. England again was the leading shipper, sending $14,210,-060. Other shipments included $5,-873,980 from Japan, $3,840,000 from Sweden and $2,821,654 from Canada. Silver imports were at the low level of $822,111, including $407,783 from Mexico and $229,591 from Canada.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, Sept. 2.—More optimistic views among traders regarding European affairs reflected in firmer stock prices today, although trading was restricted. Gains and losses for the day were about evenly divided with European bonds on the upside. French favorites were in good demand from continental sources and British funds held firm. Other sections of the list including transatlantic closed with fractional changes.

Paris—The bourse closed with an irregular tone and prices in the industrial group was mixed. Government bonds and international issues sold higher. Bank of France stock moving up 280 francs. Royal Dutch 80 and Suez Canal gained 280 francs. Rentes finished 30 centimes lower to 15 higher.

Liverpool—Wheat futures lost ¼d to ¾d net on continued pressure of American export wheat, beneficial rains in the Argentine and liberal offerings from Canada. Cotton futures moved up 1 to 2 points due to buying which was promoted largely by the weakness in sterling exchange. Offerings were light and fresh speculative incentives were lacking.

New Offerings In August Show Gain Over July

Total Is $237,852,000 in Bonds, $3,391,000 in Stocks.

New York, Sept. 2.—Flotations of securities in August were larger than in July, principally because of a sharp increase in public utility bond financing. Bond offerings of $237,852,000, representing 41 issues, were the second largest total for a month since March, 1937, being exceeded only by the $368,702,000 in June, 1938, when 33 issues were marketed.

Last month's offerings compared with $151,302,000 for 35 issues in July and $68,387,000 for 30 flotations in August, 1937.

Stock offerings in August amounted to $3,391,000 for two issues, against $99,000 for an offering in the preceding month and $12,665,000 for August, 1937, when 14 issues were marketed.

In the eight months ended on August 31, bond offerings amounted to $1,336,817,000 for 282 issues, compared with $1,761,313,000 for 393 flotations in the similar period of 1937. Stock offerings aggregated $46,749,524 for 19 issues, against $407,982,000 for 157 issues in the first eight months of 1937. Both stock and bond offerings so far this year have been the smallest for any similar period since 1934.

What to Do?

The wise look forward, seeing how
—Old Mother Nature.

"You're crazy," declared Jerry Muskrat, staring hard at Mrs. Jerry.

Mrs. Jerry shook her head. "No, I'm not," said she. "I'm not crazy at all. I'm just looking ahead, and it makes me uneasy."

"Then stop looking ahead," replied Jerry dryly.

"Then I would be crazy," retorted Mrs. Jerry.

That made Jerry blink. He stared all around and over the smiling Pool as if he expected to see it changed somehow. It wasn't. Then he looked hard at Mrs. Jerry. "Explain," said he.

"We have raised two large families this year," said Mrs. Jerry. "Several of the children have gone

"They have to eat," said Mrs. Jerry.

"Of course they have to eat. Do talk sense," replied Jerry impatiently.

"Supposing we have a hard and extra long winter," said Mrs. Jerry.

"Well, supposing we do; what of it?" Jerry retorted.

"Will there be food enough for so many?" asked Mrs. Jerry quietly.

Jerry looked over to where the cattails and rushes grew. For the first time it occurred to him that there were not so many as in some years. He mentioned it.

Mrs. Jerry nodded. "Just so," said she. "There are not so many as usual, and more of us to eat them. It is the same with other foods around here. It is thinking about this that has made me so uneasy."

"Well, there is no use worrying. There is nothing we can do about it that I can see," squeaked Jerry rather impatiently.

"Isn't there?" asked Mrs. Jerry mildly.

"What?" demanded Jerry.

"We can move," replied Mrs. Jerry.

"Where to?" was Jerry's prompt comeback.

"That is the question," Mrs. Jerry replied.

"No question about it," retorted Jerry. "There is no place to move, so of course we can't move."

"Of course there is a place to move to. If there wasn't what would the children do when they leave home to go out into the Great World? I know a place that will do very well indeed, if we decide to go," replied Mrs. Jerry.

"So that's what you were doing—looking for a new home—when you were gone those two days!" exclaimed Jerry, suddenly understanding.

"That is what I was doing and I found what I was looking for," replied Mrs. Jerry.

"Neither do I," admitted Mrs. Jerry. "It isn't a question of what we want to do but of what is the wise thing to do. If we stay here and have a long winter we may starve, and the children living around here may starve. If we leave we will go to a place where there is food enough for us, and there will be enough here then for those who remain."

Jerry sighed dismally. "What to do?" said he.

"That is the question," replied Mrs. Jerry. "You better look things over with me."

The Thrill That Comes Once in a Lifetime.

Bob Burns

Says—

I've always been pretty much of a dreamer, both during my sleepin' and wakin' hours. So here lately I been readin' up on the subject of dreams, but I find that most authors on the subject use such big words I can't get heads nor tails what they're talkin' about. One author said that dreams are related to the subconscious mind and have nothin' to do with daily activities.

But the other day I played golf while my wife went down town to an auction sale. That night in my sleep I hollered "fore!" My wife sat up in bed and hollered "Four and a quarter!"

10 Pilots Poise For Take-off in Cleveland Dash

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Sept. 2.—Airplane records are expected to topple tomorrow when 10 of the Nation's fastest fliers—including one woman, pretty Jacqueline Cochran—take off from here for Cleveland in the annual Bendix speed dash.

Diminutive Robert Perlick, smoke writer, will fly at 20,000 feet, using a light-weight oxygen mask recently developed by the Mayo Foundation of Rochester, Miss. He is flying a Beechcraft. Paul Mantz, in a rebuilt Orion-Lockheed, and George Armistead, in a rebuilt Q. E. D. Special, also will try the 20,000-foot level.

Pilots continuing on from Cleveland to Bendix, N. J., will be in line for special prizes, in additon to the $30,000 offered for best times into Cleveland.

Plane Set Record.

Both Frank Fuller, San Francisco, last year's winner, and Miss Cochran are flying Seversky pursuit-type planes. Miss Cochran's is the one Alexander P. Seversky, ariplane builder, flew here from New York this week to set a new East-West record.

Lee Gehlback is flying the Wedell-Williams racer in which James Haizlip won the Bendix event six years ago. Frank Cordova will gun a Bellanca. Other contestants include John Hinche, in a Sparten Executive; Ross Hadley in a Beechcraft, and Max Constant in a Beechcraft owned by Miss Cochran.

Only two of the pilots, Miss Cochran and Fuller, announced refuelling points. They intend to stop at Kansas City. All ten planes are radio-equipped and all will fly on airline radio beams.

The first pilot to reach Cleveland will win $7,000; the next four, $5,000, $3,000, $2,000 and $1,000, respectively. Any pilot who breaks Fuller's record to Bendix, of 9 hours and 35 minutes—made last year—will receive $5,000 additional.

Cleveland, Sept. 2.—A dozen racing airplanes will start a three-day assault on speed records in excess of 260 miles an hour over a closed, 10-mile course here tomorrow.

Tomorrow's Bendix transcontinental and the pylon races are worth more than $100,000 to winning pilots entered in the eleventh National Air Races.

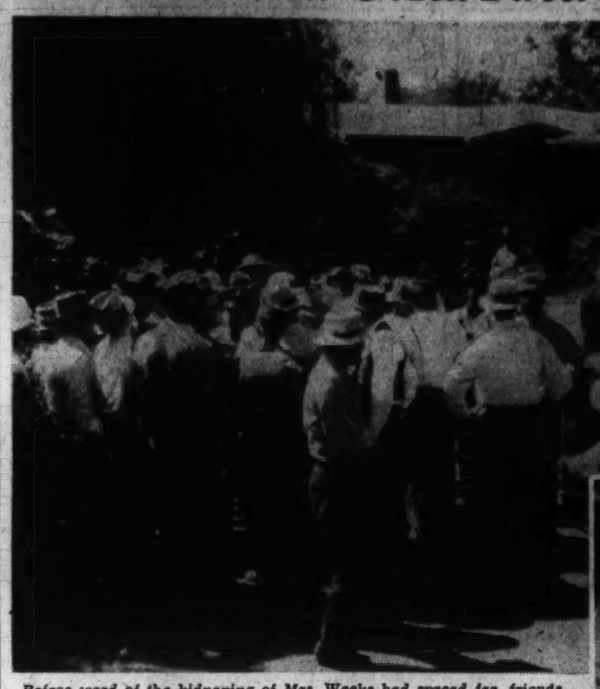
The suit alleged alterations in plans had cost the contractor thousands of dollars more than the anticipated cost.

Wirephotos: G-Men Direct Search for Abductors of Rancher's Wife



Before word of the kidnaping of Mrs. Weeks had spread far, friends of the couple gathered outside the rancher's home at Yuba City, Calif., and hurriedly organized posses who searched the countryside in high-powered cars. Federal agents from San Francisco took charge of the hunt.

A. L. Rogers and A. W. Kimmerer, sheriff of Yuba County, immediately set up a patrol around the residence and started photographing footprints believed made by the abductors.

The ransom note was found in machine stolen from the Meeks' home and in which the bandits made their escape carrying Mrs. Meeks. The car was found abandoned at Marysville, 12 miles away. Meeks had been left trussed in his house after the kidnapers had looted the residence and fled carrying his 55-year-old wife.

Western Co-operative Expert New Deputy Governor of FCA

Appointment of Dr. E. A. Stockdyk, of California, as deputy governor of the Farm Credit Administration was announced yesterday by FCA Gov. W. I. Myers.

Dr. Stockdyk will assume his new position on leave from the Berkeley, Calif., Bank for Co-operatives, of which he is president. The bank is a unit of the Farm Credit Administration.

Here, Dr. Stockdyk's work will be concerned primarily with the division of research and extension in the field of co-operative marketing and purchasing.

The new deputy governor brings to the position a background of experience in the field of co-operative business. In the last five years, the Berkeley Bank for Co-operatives has made loans to co-operatives in the eleventh farm credit district, which embraces the States of California, Utah, Nevada, to the amount of approximately $44,000,000. Now the bank, which is one of the largest of the 12 regional banks for co-operatives, has $11,000,000 in loans outstanding.

Before heading the Berkeley bank, Dr. Stockdyk spent 13 years in college and university teaching, specializing in studies of farm marketing and co-operative market organizations. He has written extensively in bulletins and books, on co-operative subjects and, in the last three years, served as a member of California's prorate commission.

The division he will be associated with here was created 12 years ago as a unit in the Bureau of Agricultural Economics; was transferred later to the Federal Farm Board and again transferred to the Farm Credit Administration.

Madeoy was arrested by vice squad police in his delicatessen in the 800 block of H street northwest. He was charged also with selling liquor without a license, for appearance in Police Court today.

The Customs Bureau announced yesterday seizure of $60,000 worth of opium from the Philippine vessel S. S. Don Jose, at Portland, Ore. Members of the crew were questioned, but no arrests were made.

The opium, contained in 1,579 one-tael tins, was found buried under coal in a bunker, agents said.

Car Pass Links Suspect to Rifling Of Doctor's Home

Discovering of a year 'round streetcar pass on the person of a 28-year-old colored man arrested last night by the pick-up squad convinced police the man is the same who broke into the home of Dr. Frederick Morhart, Capital Transit Co. physician, earlier in the day.

Dr. Morhart told police a thief had taken his pass, $100 worth of medical instruments, a bag of medicines and a billfold from his house at 1704 Sixteenth street northwest. Only the pass has been recovered as yet.

Questioning of the colored man at police headquarters revealed he was responsible for the disappearance of a radio from Columbia Hospital. According to Capt. Ira Keck, acting chief of detectives, he also is suspected of having committed about 40 robberies from houses in the Sixteenth street section.

Md. Strikers Stone Truckers

Union Official Declares There Will Be No Walkout Here.

First violence in the strike of approximately 2,000 truck drivers and helpers in Baltimore yesterday resulted in the arrest of 11 men. At the same time, assurance was given that there would be no sympathetic strike here.

A caravan of 16 trucks en route from Baltimore to Richmond was stoned at Laurel by autoloads of strikers. One man was injured and six windshileds were smashed. Other groups were escorted to the District line by motorcycle escorts.

They passed through Washington with police escorts and no difficulty. In Virginia no trouble was encountered by the caravan, but it halted a mile and a half south of Woodbridge, on the Richmond highway, until a police escort arrived. An advance scout had sighted six carloads of men waiting at the top of a steep hill.

Charles Beall, head of Local 638 of the American Federation of Labor Truck Drivers Union, said last night that drivers here expected a new contract to be signed Tuesday, and that there would be no sympathy strike.

Man Admits Guilt As Courts Always Believe Officers

After hearing evidence, Judge Hobart Newman asked Russell what he had to say about the charge.

"I wasn't drunk, your honor," declared Russell. He said he suffered from heart trouble, and had fallen asleep in a vacant lot.

"Why did you plead guilty?" queried Judge Newman.

"You're going to take the officer's word for it, anyway, aren't you?" asked Russell. The judge ordered Russell to serve 15 days.
